Plans for the home-coming celebration, which was proposed by the local press couple of weeks ago, are beginning to take tangible form. The provisional committee appointed at that time have had a meeting at which the following resolution was introduced and unanimously passed: Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the proposed celebration known as "Home Coming Week" to be held in this city, meets with the approval of this committee, provided features of entertainment be coupled with the celebration. We therefore commend that for the purpose of securing the sentiment of our citizens generally upon the subject, that a public meeting be called by the chairman on Tuesday evening, August 22, at 7:30 o'clock, at the council chamber. Edgar Howard and family, who spent last week at a similar celebration held at Glenwood, Iowa, report that they had a great time there, meeting old-time friends, who had been gone for many years, and who had been attracted to the old home once more by the prospect of meeting the friends, the schoolmates and playmate of by-gone days. Let everybody turn out to the council chamber next Tuesday evening and start the ball rolling with an energy that will allow no chance of disappointment to anybody.

The GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW AS TOLD TO Hush S. Fullerton

BY JOHN J. EVERS.

"King of Second Basemen," Who is Voted Among Players as Quickest Thinking of Present Day Ball Players.

A person might think that after eight or ten years of ball playing it would be a hard matter to pick out the greatest play a fellow ever saw, but it isn't. I remember perhaps half a dozen plays: Mordecai Brown's stop and throw that saved a game for us in the series against the White Sox for the world's championship; Fred Clarke's catch in the crowd that, I think, beat us out of the pennant in 1909; the running jump by Germany

JOHN J. EVERS.

Schaefer that robbed us of the opening game of the first world's series against Detroit, and a lot of others—but Jimmy Sheppard made the play that I think was the greatest I ever saw, and one perhaps I never will see again.

At that, it wasn't a showy play, and I doubt if a hundred persons in the big crowd that saw the game realized what a wonderful piece of playing it was. He did it so easily that to most of the spectators it looked as if the runner had blundered, and they did not give Sheek credit for his work.

The play happened in one of the games against New York in 1905 when we were fighting them all through the season for the lead and the pennant. It was on the Chicago grounds, and I believe during the June series. We were ahead—two runs in the lead, I think, and the game was nearing an end, when a single and Doyle's two-bagger put men on second and third with no one out, and it looked pretty bad. The crowd was on the field, and near the stand in left field had cut in onto fair ground, so that a long fly was likely to drop in there any minute and turn the whole game upside down. The batter, Seymour, I think it was, hit a hard line fly about ten feet inside the foul line and straight toward that crowd.

Sheppard was playing the batter perfectly, and by a hard sprint he reached the ball just as it was going into the crowd and made one of the prettiest catches of the season. He couldn't stop short after catching the ball but plunged on into the crowd until he was almost out of sight. The runner on third base, of course, had held his position, and when he saw Sheek mixed up with the crowd he started for the plate. Sheppard leaped clear of the crowd and took a long swing with his arm and cut loose the ball. But instead of throwing to the plate he changed the direction of the throw while his arm was swinging and shot the ball on the line fast and straight into Steinfeld's hands. Doyle had seen Sheppard's arm swing and was fooled into believing that he was throwing to the plate, so he came sprinting to third—and Steinfeld met him and tagged him out, of course letting the runner score from third. Sheppard had figured in a fraction of an instant that he could not get clear of the crowd in time to catch the runner at the plate, and that if he threw there Doyle could trot to third and probably score on a fly or hit, whereas if he caught Doyle and let the other run count the bases would be cleared with two out—and Chicago still one run ahead.

So, pretending and going through every motion of throwing to the plate, he shot to third—and saved the game. After Doyle was caught the next two batters made hits, and if Sheppard really had thrown home New York would have made perhaps five runs in that inning, and would have won the game easily.

So perfect was Sheppard's acting in pretending to throw home that both Tinker and I thought the ball was going to the catcher, and Steiny said afterward the ball was half way to him before he realized it was aimed at him instead of at the home plate. (Copyright, 1911, by W. G. Chapman.)

The management have always given the people a good program, but the Chautauqua Board think they have a little the best talent this year they ever had. On the program is to be found such noted lecturers as Ex-Governor Folk of Missouri, Chancellor Bradford, Dr. Lynch, Allan A. Tanner, Father MacCorry, the Paivist priest, one of the best known orators in the country, Dr. Chase, Sias, Long and others of National reputation as lecturers, Sid Landon, the character delineator, Packard, the great platform cartoonist, and Laurant the magician. Then there is the Royal Italian Guards Band. This band has only been in this country two years, and this is their first appearance west of Chicago. To hear this band is a treat no one should miss. The Killarney Ladies' Orchestra is another of the great attractions that will appear at the Chautauqua. These artists were selected from the schools of both America and Europe. Nowhere can you get as much for your money as at the Fullerton Chautauqua.

Write J. D. Barnes, Secy., for illustrated program.

A special train will leave Columbus at 8:30 a. m. for the Fullerton Chautauqua Sunday August 13th, and 20th, returning after the evening program. Special attractions have been arranged for both days.

An Age Of Experts.

We are living in an age for specialism; an age when success can only be attained by the concentration of every thought upon the unswerving pursuit of a single object. Musty theories and quack cures cannot stand against progressive medical science. Recent discoveries are forcing old methods of treatment in the shade.

Extraordinary diseases require extraordinary treatment. It is easy to treat simple disorders. Most any ordinary doctor or medicine will. Complicated that defy ordinary treatments require extraordinary remedies to vanquish them. Our treatment as compared with others differs as does the sunlight from a tallow candle. It does not take FAITH, does not take CONFIDENCE, does not take even HOPE to get cures. IT TAKES ONLY A TRIAL—all we ask. It cures whether the sufferer believes it or not.
