

'Charter Oak' wherein the brave Captain Wadsworth concealed the charter for the colonies of Connecticut. This charter contained many privileges which the liberty-loving people of that time valued very highly.

'Penn made his treaty with the Indians beneath a spacious, tall elm tree. The savages said they 'would live in love with William Penn and his children as long as the sun, moon and stars should stand.'

'It was beneath the branches of the old elm at Cambridge where George Washington took command and with an army of true and brave patriots won liberty for our land. Thus we see that the trees of history have an intimate connection with our country's early days.

'Bryant in his Thanatopsis says:

'To him who in the love of Nature holds communion with her visible forms she speaks a various language.'

'What of the forms of Nature are more visible than the tree? Let us learn to hold communion with these visible forms that we may listen to their various languages. Perhaps it will come from the rustling leaves and maybe from our pure thoughts as we repair beneath her shades for an hour of study, meditation or repose. By so doing we learn to appreciate these glorious manifestations of the goodness of Almighty God to mortal man.'

IN ERROR.

It seems that the late republican legislature of Nebraska has been accused and convicted by the Omaha Daily Bee of having enacted a very good law which the populist Governor Poynter vetoed.

Therefore, the subjoined is reproduced from the Bee of the 28th ultimo with the hope that somebody will soon publish the bill vetoed and the veto:

'J. Sterling Morton in his paper, THE CONSERVATIVE, among other things upbraids the late republican legislature because no law was enacted to enable the people of the entire county to have a voice in the election of all members of their county board. Mr. Morton in this is wide of the mark, probably from misinformation. He should know that the legislature passed a bill restoring to the people of this county their right to choose their commissioners, but the bill was vetoed by the populist governor out of political motives.'

The June Atlantic Monthly will contain the opening chapters of a new serial story entitled, "To Have and to Hold," by Miss Mary Johnston, the rising and popular young author of the brilliant historical romance, "Prisoners of Hope," which has been so successful during the past season. Miss Johnston's work not only became immediately and unusually popular, but is admitted by the best critics to be of the highest order of historical fiction, full of vigor and interest, and yet accurate and true to life and time.

Miss Johnston's Atlantic story is placed at a much earlier period of Virginian history, that of Pocahontas and her husband, John Rolfe. It is, however, permeated with the same fullness and accuracy of historical description and detail, while the freshness and exceeding interest of the plot will hold the reader's attention from the very opening.

THE DRINK HABIT Cured at Home!

We are treating and curing more patients than any other drink cure in the world. This is because we treat our patients at their homes, saving the time, expense and publicity of an institute treatment; because we use no hypodermic injections with their bad effects, but give healthful tonics; because we not only antidote the drink crave but cure the diseased conditions arising from the use of intoxicants. By our system of correspondence, each patient receives individual care and instructions.

We have received the highest and best endorsements of any cure in the world, from leaders among men whose commendation the whole world could not buy. Hon. L. S. Coffin, president of the Railway Temperance Association of America, and founder of the "White Button" movement says: "The work of the Bartlett Cure is well nigh miraculous. It stands in advance of all other cures for drunkenness."

Write us in confidence stating your case. We will send free, in plain package, Dr. Bartlett's latest work, an exhaustive treatise on the cause, effect and cure of alcoholism.
