

INCUBATORS FOR BOYS.

By appealing to a child's pride in ownership character is developed. Give him something to own, something that shall be his. His pride is thus aroused and he is encouraged to become an owner rather than a borrower. In gratifying a boy's desires in this direction it may be done in a practical manner. Give him something of use, or something that will be of educational advantage.

The Sure Hatch Incubator Journal of Clay Center, Nebraska, makes the following suggestion that is worthy of the consideration of parents:

"These schools of training are commendable, but the large per cent of the farmers in the future will come from the farms without the advantages of science as developed at these schools. It therefore stands us in hand to make the best use of our home schools, the farms. Every boy and girl likes to own something, and for the educational purposes alone they should own something. Nothing fills the bill better than an incubator and a flock of poultry. It cultivates a sense of care and business management that would be lacking when they were called on to do business with a competing public. It is in their time of life that impressions are permanent, good or bad. The writer of this was a boy once, raised on a farm; owned every colt—or rather owned a new colt each spring—owned it until it became real valuable, then he had the privilege of trading it for the youngest again and was educated to think the young colt more valuable for a boy than a colt old enough to bring a good price. The result of this line of training and encouragement, he landed in business at twenty-one a regular pumpkin-head to do business. The farm had no attractions for him, he could see nothing in it but plow and harrow and doing without money from crop to crop. Am not blaming Dad, he simply did not know how to educate a boy. Had there been an agricultural college or other school that occurred to him to be a good thing for a boy, money would not have stood in the way. As above stated, he was not aware that he run the best school on earth, right at home among realities. Of course, we would rather the farmer would buy his boy an incubator, but rather than see the boys grow up without ideas of business care and management, it would certainly pay to really give them a start, even if it was nothing more valuable than a hen and chicks. Boys and girls like to own something; as soon as they are old enough to play marbles or jump the rope, they will want to own the marbles and rope at least."

An appeal is being circulated in Massachusetts for contributions towards the erection of a suitable memorial to Roger Wolcott in Boston.
