

THE JANUARY ATLANTIC.

In the January Atlantic Professor Woodrow Wilson opens the first of an important series of papers by famous hands, with the History of the Reconstruction of the Southern States, enumerating the strange and new questions that arose, and for which no answers had been provided in the constitution; and showing that in the end, while the spirit of union in the constitution prevailed, the whole settlement of the affair was extra-constitutional, and the "consent of the governed" was no more thought of than it had been during the preceding years of war.

Elizabeth Bisland discusses The Time Spirit of the Twentieth Century, the changes that the nineteenth century has wrought, and the programme and ideals with which the new century will begin.

R. Van Bergen sketches the history of the Empress Dowager of China, her phenomenal rise to power, her present grasp of the situation, and the things necessary for the future of China.

Charles A. Conant discusses The Growth of Public Expenditures, showing that if more is spent nowadays than formerly, more is demanded, and a higher grade of public service is required in every direction.

Mrs. Sara M. Handy discusses The Last Days of the Confederacy as they were seen and lived through by a woman who was in the midst of the final struggle.

W. L. Scaife gives a powerful description of Pittsburg, its attractions, its opportunities, its demerits.

R. B. Johnson gives an admirable summary of the year's results in his Letter from England. He touches on the Boer war and its consequences, the deaths of the year. The great productions, literary and scientific, are treated fully.
