

of local conditions, to decide which party policy is, on the whole, best for the country. The only possible way out of this tangle is to get rid of the local handicap through franchise restrictions, then drop the out-of-date questions of the sixties and seventies."

Commenting on W. J. Bryan's recent remarks in favor of a continuance of fusion, the Nashville American (Dem.) says: "Democrats who know why they are democrats and what democracy is and has ever been, want no fusion with populists, no flirting with political derelicts. The party must drop populism or it must go out of business except as a mere sideshow."

BREAKING OF THE SOLID SOUTH.

"President McKinley may have done something towards hastening the disruption of the solid South, but his chief opponent in the last two presidential campaigns has done much more," says the Nashville Banner (dem.) "Had the democratic party pursued the even tenor of its way on the old lines, the loyalty of the South to that party, would have remained unshaken, for a longer time at least, but Bryan radicalism, coupled with Bryan defeats, has been too trying a test for the unquestioning continuance in subservience to a party name of ten million people spread all the way from the Potomac to the Rio Grande."
