

BURYING THE FALSE PROPHETS.

As Dr. Bryan sits in his $5,000 stable and rubs the neck of his $500 heifer while the carpenters are working upon his $25,000 residence, he can, no doubt, truly sympathize with his prophet, Senator J. K. Jones, of Arkansas, who was buried out of sight by an almost unanimous vote of the democrats of his state last Saturday at the primary elections when candidates for the next legislature were selected and who will elect Jones' successor to the United States senate. Ex-Governor Clarke was Jones' opponent and Clarke will have 90 out of 132 votes on joint ballot.

Surely Dr. Bryan ought to begin to understand the signs of the times that the democratic party has written upon the political wall. Bryan and Jones have each worked the democratic party for a pretty good sized fortune while denouncing the wrongs of the downtrodden masses from the rear end of a Pullman, making frantic swings for the under jaw of all kinds of plutocracy and combines except those controlled by themselves.

Slowly, but with great certainty, the re-establishment of the old democratic party is coming, and before the campaign of 1904 is inaugurated the party will be fairly back again to the point where the kidnaping took place in 1896 and the contaminating, belittling and sacrificing influences of corrupt fusion will have been nationally condemned, damned and kicked out. Populism and fusion is decently dead and expunged from democratic doctrines except in a few benighted localities in Nebraska, and its burial here would have taken place a year ago had it not been for the persevering qualities of Dr. Bryan who has been constantly applying his electric battery to the corpse, making it wiggle and kick occasionally. These antics the good Doctor believes resemble life sufficiently to fool both populists and democrats. The great leaders and the great papers of the party are aligning themselves with the traditions of the democratic party, and the time is rapidly approaching for a general overturning and wiping out of the false doctrines and impractical notions of popism that have been pasted onto the principles of true government by the manipulation of the Nebraska Doctor.

Throughout the south, the east, the north and the great west the tide is rapidly changing and in 1904 Doctor Bryan's popism will hold about the same relation to the democratic party as does Jim Weaverism.

Let the glad day appear.—Kearney (Neb.) Democrat.

AS USUAL.

The Quill acknowledges the receipt of one measly package of garden seed, retail price about 8 cents, from the department of agriculture through the pull our congressman has at Washington. Thanks. Our garden was planted long before the seed arrived and as it is past planting time they are worthless. If Congressman Robinson will induce the department to send a stamp we will gladly "report the results" as requested.—Schuyler (Neb.) Quill.

CORRECTLY ANSWERED.

Up at the High School, they have adopted the plan of calling the pupils Mr. and Miss. The other day one of the teachers called one of the pupils Mr. Coldhammer. The teacher called the name several times, but the boy paid no attention. At last he asked the boy what was the matter; why he didn't answer when called. This is what the boy said: "My name is not Mr. Coldhammer; my name is Henry. My father's name is Mr. Coldhammer, and he is at home, and sends me here to study."—Atchison Globe.

THE PRESIDENT IN THE SOUTH.

The welcome which Mr. Roosevelt has received at Charleston and the impression produced by his presence and his finely conceived remarks there will remain among the notable events in the history of the present administration. There is no more doubt of the sincerity of the president's welcome by the South Carolinians than there is of the sincerity of his utterances to them. It was an occasion which brought the heart of the North and the heart of the South nearer together.—New York Sun.
