The preparations for the Kansas game calls to mind the interest and excitement that attended the contest with that team in 97. A crowd which for that time was considered immense assembled on the bleachers. Enthusiasm ran high. Probably no other game for years before had brought out the spirit that was manifested that day. Between halves practically every male student on the bleachers left his place and the crowd joined in lock step parade on and down the field until time for the play to begin again. There was more enthusiasm manifested than at any time since, until the Minnesota game last fall.

Kansas is coming up Saturday determined to score. This must be prevented. The student body must do its share to prevent it. Every man should be in his place in chapel tomorrow. He should not only be present but he should be prepared to do his best in making the meeting a success.

LITTLE DANGER IN FOOTBALL.

Football has been played by Harvard, Pennsylvania, Yale and Princeton ever since its introduction into America, and not a single fatal accident has occurred to any of the players of the "Big Four", who are representative of the average American university athlete.

It is true that accidents are numerous and occasionally fatal; but it is not true that fatal accidents are more numerous with foot ball than with any other game as is the general impression among non athletic people. Fatal accidents are often wrongfully attributed to the game itself when they should be attributed to other sources.

The precautions exercised by the University of Pennsylvania are fairly representative of the way the sport is regulated in the leading institutions. At Pennsylvania every candidate who presents himself for the team is required to pass a thorough physical examination. If the examiner is dissatisfied in any particular the athlete is not allowed to play. The same examination is repeated at different times during the season. When a player is suffering from injuries, the authorities refuse to allow him to participate in the game.

It is the system, strictly adhered to, which prevents fatal accidents in the big colleges. What accidents are caused by the game occur among the teams of small colleges and schools. Because of their lack of material, an athlete already injured is allowed to participate in the game. It is this unwise exposure to danger which should be checked. The game of football has lost none of its attractions. On the contrary, it has steadily grown in the favor of the people. Properly regulated, as in the larger colleges, the game contains no more of the element of danger than any other popular sport.

It has been estimated that the annual loss to the United States from insect ravages amounts to between three and four hundred millions of dollars. When it becomes known that not a single crop which is grown upon the farm escapes the attacks of insect pests, it will be apparent that an essential part of an agricultural education should be a training in elementary entomology, and that the course in the subject named above should be planned to give such knowledge as will enable those who take it to combat successfully the ravages of insect pests. Are there not many young men in Nebraska who desire to do some work in Entomology? The University of Nebraska School of Agriculture which is now in session offers some excellent work in the study of insects.

ARBITRATION OF LABOR DISPUTES.

Why cannot we have an arbitration law here like the one that is working so well in New Zealand? The great objection is said to be the enforcement of awards by the arbitration court and the fear that master and man has of the compulsion feature. Of this a writer says: "Perhaps a word about the 'compulsion' may clear away a stumbling block. No workingman can be brought before the tribunals, nor appeal to them, unless he belongs to a trades union, nor unless that trades union has legally registered for the purpose of summoning or being summoned in such proceedings, and such workingmen can withdraw their registration and pass out from under the law if they wish. Employers and employes can keep out of the reach of the arbitration law by the simple device of arranging with each other not to resort to it. They can then strike and lockout to their hearts' content, if such war does come from the heart. Here is the compulsion: If one party to a labor dispute wants to arbitrate instead of fighting, the other party, if summoned by it, must come into court and arbitrate. It is the compulsion of our civil courts, which guard us with lawsuits instead of suits of armor. And under the New Zealand law no business man or workingman who does not like the award is compelled to work. They can stay home or go fishing; only, if they do work, it must be under the terms of the award. The 'practical' result is that both employers and employes all over the country have formed unions to take advantage of the law; they could withdraw, but they do not do so; the law is so popular that its scope is widened every year, and during the past year was amended to include several classes not before given the privilege of arbitration, such as clerks, tram-car men, and others."

This would seem to be fair to both parties to a labor controversy, and if tried in one state and found to work successfully would be readily adopted by all the states. The great losses that periodically effect everyone by the numerous strikes here certainly call for some such solution that would be fair to labor and fair to the employers.
