The mass meeting, Friday, developed a wonderful amount of latent enthusiasm. Every one realized that Kansas, the ancient foe of Nebraska, had to be beaten and beaten badly. The possibility of a big score against them served as an incentive not found in some of the other games. Nebraska has reason to be proud of the record made, not only by the team but also on the side lines by the rooters.

The defeat of the Minnesota by Wisconsin by the same score by which the latter team beat Nebraska must be a hard dose for the Gopers to swallow. Nebraska has all the more reason to feel proud of the record she has made in her big games this year.

THE ART EXHIBITION.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Nebraska art association will offer the students of art an opportunity to see some of the latest American pictures. The exhibition this year is to be known as the "Pan-American," as the pictures have been selected from the best works in the art exhibit at Buffalo. The exhibition, as formerly will be held in the Art Hall in the Library building of the University.

It will open December 26 with a reception and will close January 16.

Miss Florence N. Levy who was connected with the art department of the Pan American, has selected the pictures. Miss Levy is the publisher of the Art Annual and ranks high as an art critic. The Nebraska collection has been selected with very careful discrimination. Mr. Blashford's "Angel With Flaming Swords," is the most striking picture of the group. He is a well known artist in the west. His work as decorator of the Congressional Library at Washington attracted much attention. This picture alone will be well worth a visit to the gallery.

The exhibition will be confined exclusively to American art. The "Shaw" collection of prize pictures will be in the group. In 1892 Samuel T. Shaw of New York established a fund with which to buy the prize pictures of the annual exhibition of the society of American artists. The "Shaw" collection was considered the finest at Buffalo and was given a special room. The works to be sent to Lincoln were painted during the years from 1892 to 1899, and are as follows:

"November," M. Morgan Mellenny; "Sport," George W. Maynard; "A Yellow Rose," Irving R. Wiles; "The Batn," Edmund C. Tarbell; "The Singers," H. O. Walker; "Summer," Frank W. Benson; "A Friendly Call," William M. Chase; "In the Sun," Theodore Robinson; "The Woodland Maid," Douglas Volk; "Night and the Waning Day," George R. Barse, jr.; "Gloucester Harbor," Willard L. Metcalf; "Grey Morning," C. Morgan Mellenny; "The Brook," C. Harry Eaton; "A Fishing Scene," E. Irving Couse.

These annual exhibitions furnish the only opportunity in Lincoln of seeing the best works of art. However the success of last year's exhibition shows that under the influence of these pictures, the people are becoming genuine students and lovers of art. Lectures will be given by competent persons on the various pictures. This will increase the educational value of the exhibition.

A department will also be arranged for the pictures of Nebraska artists. Miss Hayden of the Art Department of the State University will be in charge and will endeavor to make it the most popular feature of the exhibition.

NEW CAMERA CLUB.

Something new in the way of contest is being considered by some of the engineering students. It is proposed to organize a camera club and have an annual contest at which pictures of engineering works only will be accepted. With the successful pictures the club will then challenge similar clubs at other colleges and thus afford an interesting contest during the time when athletics do not flourish.

As a great many engineers in practice find it almost necessary to use a camera, it seems proper that prospective engineers should learn to make pictures at school and to this end a club would be of considerable assistance. The club could retain all the pictures that were successful at its various contests and thus in a short time, appropriate decoration could be obtained for a cozy club room where all the latest literature concerning photography could be available and where the camera enthusiasts could meet for the discussion of their hobby.

In case any student should desire to make any proposition with regard to the organization of a camera club, the Nebraskan would be glad to receive communications to that effect.

No man can be successful in home dairying unless he has a thorough knowledge of dairy machinery. Recognizing this fact, the department of Dairy Husbandry in the University of Nebraska School of Agriculture is making extensive preparations to give a thorough course in the manipulation of hand separators. The department has ten kinds of separators for use in the course this year. We urge all young men who are interested in dairying to avail themselves of this opportunity to obtain a knowledge of the science.

Nebraska has a great future as a horticultural state, but experience has taught that climatic conditions in the west are vastly different from those in the eastern states. Our severe climate make it necessary to know what varieties to plant and how to take care of them after planting. Many orchards fail because the owners do not know what varieties to select and what culture methods to use. Hence it will be readily seen that scientific methods must be used by the orchardist. No school offers a better course in horticulture than the University School of Agriculture. A large amount of field practice is given and the laboratory work is of the first order.
