Nebraska is to be congratulated on the trio of men she has chosen to conduct football affairs next year. The retention of Coach Booth, insures a man at the head of the training work who cannot be surpassed in the west. The past two seasons have demonstrated his ability in his line and have tended to increase more and more the confidence of the men in him. His intimate acquaintance with the men and the student body in general makes him an invaluable adjunct to Nebraska football circles.

Captain Westover owes his reelection to the fact that during the last season he proved himself to be one of the necessities. No one connected with football in any way worked harder and accomplished more for the successful issue of the season than he. His hard vigorous play that would not give up under the most adverse circumstances together with his natural talent, won for him the reputation of being one of the best tackles in the west. With Captain Westover at the head of the team Nebraska may feel sure that nothing that will tend toward making the season a successful one, will be left undone.

While Mr. Engel is comparatively new in football circles in the University he has had experience that has demonstrated his ability as a business man. Before coming to the University he managed a team at Omaha and he was manager of the University track team for a season.

With these men at the head Nebraska football ought to experience its most successful season next year.

Dr. Fling will address the class in pedagogy Thursday afternoon.

PROFESSOR FREDERIC W. TAYLOR AT THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

The World's Fair Bulletin, a publication put out in the interest of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition has the following to say of a former member of the faculty of the University of Nebraska:

"Mr. Frederic W. Taylor, formerly professor of horticulture in the State University of Nebraska, later superintendent of agriculture, horticulture and forestry at the Omaha Exposition, and more recently at the Pan-American, is now in St. Louis where he has taken up work in connection with the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company's Department of Agriculture. Mr. Taylor was the son of a pioneer horticulturist of Iowa, and was brought up to the business. Afterwards his prominence in the nursery business in Nebraska led to his call to a professorship in the State University. He was sent abroad several times by the government for scientific pomological study and his duties at the Pan-American and in connection with the Paris Exposition have given him a very broad special training in exposition details and features. He is still a comparatively young man, having been born in 1860."

Y. W. C. A. CALENDARS.

The calendars gotten out by the Young Women's Christian Association will be on sale Thursday and Friday in the Library Hall. The calendars are pretty and considering the artistic work, very low in price. They are in two colors gray and brown and consist of three sheets and a cover. Pictures of the Chancellor and of the buildings together with typical University scenes designed by two of the girls adorn the pages. Students should be sure to see them when they start out to look for Christmas presents.

A TALE OF A HAT.

A good story is told about a senior, whose name must for obvious reasons be withheld. The tale goes that he borrowed a senior cap from a frat brother to protect him from the storm, as he went to the library night before last. The sight of the cap, lying calmly on the table beside the austere senior, naturally excited the envy of an avaricious junior, and long before the librarian tapped the bell, the cap was safely stowed away on the junior's shelf of trophies.

The senior, becoming alarmed at the consequences of his loss, telephoned to his frat brother to send relief in the shape of a new hat. To indicate their great loyalty under such adverse circumstances they immediately despatched a straw hat resembling the 5-cent hat that the ubiquitous bare-footed boy wore just before school opened last fall. In the fourth act the senior clothed in a fur overcoat and a straw hat, was seen crossing O street with a pair of coeds clinging to his arm. There was undoubtedly a fifth act on his return to the house but particulars of the same are not given.

Some of the electrical engineering students have fitted the machine shop with electric lights and connected them with the University lighting plant. Hereafter the elements will have no control over the enthusiastic machinists.

Several new students are expected to register at the School of Music after the holidays.
