The annual foot ball game between Oxford and Cambridge was won this year by Oxford with the score of 8-0.

A valuable collection of Arctic flora, gathered by the Baldwin-Zeigler polar expedition, has been presented to Columbia.

Owing to the preparations for the electrical display in the armory which were begun yesterday, the battalion did not drill last night.

It is expected that the seniors will hold a lively meeting tomorrow morning over the question of class orator. Some of them took occasion yesterday afternoon to deliver lengthy speeches in support of their views. At one time the main hall in the University building was well crowded with oratorical seniors and attentive listeners. While it is expected that the meeting will call forth some varying views, it is not probable that the class will go back of the committee's report. The trouble at present seems to lie in the question whether this committee was authorized to act finally or not in the matter of choosing a commencement orator.

C. J. Warner, '99, prominent in debates while in the university and a member of the last legislature, has been heard from recently at Washington, D. C. where he is attending the Columbian law school. This school, at present, has about 485 students who have the splendid opportunity of hearing lectures by two members of the U. S. Supreme Court, Harlan and Brewer. Not only have they these privileges but they also enjoy the advantages of the grand congressional library which was built at a cost of about $6,000,000.

Mr. Warner often attends the meetings of congress were some very spirited debates may be heard.

While in Washington, he has met many former Nebraska students among whom are: Ernest Bessey, Benedict, Hunter, Woods, Carver and Adam McMullen.

SOME EXAMINATION QUESTIONS FROM OHIO.

The following list of examination questions were published in the Lantern, the newspaper of the University of Ohio, as a sample of what prospective teachers who take the examinations before the board of school examiners of that state, run up against.

1. Who was "the first martyr to American liberty?" What was the name of the sailor with Columbus who first saw the "New World?"

2. What period of American history was called the "era of good feeling?"

Who was the British spy detected in carrying a message to General Burgoyne in a hollow silver bullet?

3. What is a Gordian knot? What was the Hessian knot? How did Xerxes count his vast army of one million eight hundred thousand men?

4. When was Adam born? What was Bibliomancy? What caused the death of Cleopatra? What is Cleopatra's Needle.

5. How much did England pay per head for the Hessians? What King of England died in his carriage? What is meant by the saying, "Caesar's wife must be above suspicion?"

The worst of it is that the questions in the other studies are equally as senseless and foolish as these.
