This paragraph has been going the rounds of Missouri papers: "Though only 1 per cent of the population of Missouri are college graduates, the number of college bred men holding office in the state is surprisingly large. Both United States senators, eleven of the fifteen representatives, seven of the ten elective officers, five of the eight appointive state officers and fifty-one of the sixty judges of the supreme, appellate and circuit courts are college graduates."

That a colored man should be instrumental in winning last year's Harvard-Yale debate for the former is not strange, says the Northwestern of Northwestern university. But when a Chinaman wins a prize for oratory in Vanderbilt university we naturally call for a more stringent enforcement of our Chinese immigration laws.

Minnesota has done away with the old marking system and will only designate the standing of students by pass, condition or failure.

W. J. BRYAN

ON

"Tumble Weeds."

"Tumble Weeds" is a collection of original poems by Will Reed Dunroy, the author of "Corn Tassels." While some of these poems have special reference to western life, most of them are upon themes as broad as humanity, and they give evidence of an unusual degree of poetic talent in the author.—W. J. BRYAN, in the Commoner.

At all good bookstores or of the University Publishing Co., Lincoln, Nebraska, $1.00, postage prepaid.
