With the half holiday which has been granted for today, for the senior Ivy day exercises it is true a large crowd ought to turn out for the baseball game. This is the first game on the home grounds since the team returned from its triumphant trip and therefore in order to give the players an estimate of the students' appreciation of the work done by the team on its trip, every one should be present with plenty of spirit.

It is sincerely hoped that Nebraska will this year have a generous legislature, one which will see fit to give to the university that which by virtue of its importance it is justly deserving of. Doubtless the legislators will realize that unless sufficient funds are given to the regents to give the university instructors and employes a salary commensurate with the importance of the positions, this institution will remain the depot from which all other neighboring institutions will draw their timber. Already we have lost valuable men and it is not unlikely that more are to follow. The efflux of strong men from this institution has some significance and is certainly one which merits the attention of candidates for legislative honors.

THAYER AT CHAPEL.

General Thayer spoke yesterday morning in continuation of his remarks last week on "Reminiscences of General Grant." General Thayer and Grant were personal and fast friends and he spoke with much expression on the subject.

"Grant's name will go down in history," said the speaker. "He was one of those men whom the country can never forget. General Grant's policy was to always follow up a move of any kind and especially a victory by an immediate move on the enemy with or without orders if he saw that it was needed.

"An injustice was done to Grant when he was removed from his command and left at Fort Henry while General Smith took his place. This filled Grant with despair, and he never quite got over a feeling that he had not been treated fairly.

"In these times of distress, however, he was comforted by the friendship of Lincoln, who always remained his friend. Injustice came often, but they did not hinder him from doing those things for which we honor him today. He continued to victory and his perseverance won the day.

AN APPEAL.

A Professor Makes a Request. Students of the University:

I do not hesitate to ask this favor of those students who have been in my classes and with whom I am acquainted, but to other students I must appeal on the grounds solely of their willingness to do me a personal favor and also a service to the university.

Many of you are doubtless aware that the responsibility for the growth and success of the Lincoln Academy has fallen upon my shoulders. The most urgent need is that of bringing the academy to the notice of those through the state for whom it exists. I am therefore preparing a list of addresses of young people who may be looking towards this university or some other college.

Will you not this week—right now while you think of it—take five minutes and give me the addresses of such of your acquaintances as might be interested in such a school. They will be first, those who have not the privileges of a good four years' high school course, and second, those who for any cause desire to abridge as much as possible the time of preparation.

Drop list in my open mail box in the postoffice and greatly oblige. Yours cordially,
T. M. HODGMAN.

Owing to the energy of the membership committee of last year, under Miss Clark, and the present membership committee under Miss Van Zandt, the Y. W. C. A. room has been greatly improved by the addition of a fine new office desk.
