The divisions in American history 4 were given a surprise Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock, which was mutually enjoyable to professors and students alike. The quiz sections were called in special work to finish up the work for the year under Mr. Sheldon. The class meeting was held in university hall. After slips had been passed around on which questions had been written the numbers were called and the lucky ones responded with their answers. After this Mr. Sheldon brought on the surprise by calling on some young ladies and asking them to distribute the refreshments which he had prepared for the occasion. Popcorn and oranges were passed around.

Mr. Sheldon gave as his reason for this new departure that students should be better acquainted. While the students were enjoying themselves with the refreshments some invited professors of the department of American history were called upon for speeches. Those present were Professor Caldwell, Instructors Allysworth, Persinger and Sheldon, and Mr. Barrat of the Historical society.

ENGINEERING ANNUAL.

The Engineering society held a business meeting Monday evening.

The business before the meeting was the election of a board for next year's engineering annual. O. J. Ferguson was elected editor-in-chief and Fred E. Hess, business manager. The appointment of the three departmental editors was left in the hands of the editor-in-chief and business manager, but is to be confirmed by the society at its meeting next Monday. This year's annual board made a report and announced that each member purchasing one of the annuals would receive free a year book of the Michigan Engineering society, with whom they had exchanged a hundred and twenty-five copies.

Mr. C. R. Jeffords, '98, who specialized in Latin and who has been teaching that subject and ancient history in the Lincoln high school for the past two years, was recently elected to a Latin and Greek fellowship in Cornell university. There was a large number of candidates and the competition was close. This choice is another evidence of the high standing of the university of Nebraska in the east. The university is still further honored by the reelection of Mr. C. M. Story to a scholarship in philosophy in the same institution.
