University Calendar.

Oct. 3—University Club Dance.
Oct. 4—Boulder College vs. Nebraska, at Boulder, Colo.

Attention is again called, for the benefit of all those who are interested, to the new appointments which will be made as soon as practicable on the editorial board. Everyone interested in newspaper work and desiring to get some experience, both those outside and within the class of Journalism, would do well to call at the office in the afternoons from 3 to 5 o'clock, and get information they should desire. Those meaning business will have first consideration.

It was not intended in an editorial of yesterday to give the impression that the work of young ladies was not solicited by the "Daily." The young ladies in the journalism class will have their work put to use as well as that of anyone else. As a matter of fact women are coming to the front as journalists and the field is broadening for them. Any "co-ed" then, who has journalistic aspirations, will be given consideration on the paper.

Class politics have become a very absorbing topic to some people in the last few days. There have been called meetings, caucuses, whispered confidences and pledges of support. This all means something. The college political field often paves the way to greater ones, and many receive their training for public life this way. The interests concerned with these politics are not without some attractions to the average student, and present an absorbing field of interest beyond actual book study.

The following interesting figures regarding the average age of graduation at Yale has been compiled by a dean of that college.

For the first decade, the average was 22 years, 6 months and 1 day; for the second, 22 years, 5 months and 13 days; for the third, 22 years, 7 months and 7 days; and for the last, 23 years 9 months and 27 days. The youngest class was the second on the list, the class of 1864, with an average of 22 years and 7 days. The oldest was the class of 1899, which averaged 23 years 5 months and 11 days, the only class in the history of the college whose age has been above 23 years.

From present indications there will be no excursion on Friday for the Boulder game. The railroads have been too slow in this matter and have thus drawn upon themselves more or less criticism. It is well known that a large crowd would go with the team if a good rate should materialize. Word has come in also from other points in the state asking if rates had yet been made to Colorado. The consensus of opinion is that the railroads have not quite done the right thing.

The rates offered to Minnesota are much cheaper than those to Boulder. This lower rate north will not tempt the crowd as it did last year, first because they are or will not probably be as low as last year, and second, because the northern trip does not offer the same new attractions as the western. What the results of an announcement of a good rate, would be, even at this late hour, no one can say.

Some further suggestions might be made to the members of the journalism class in regard to the work which they hand in. It should be written on history paper or paper of equal size and the paper should be folded no more than is absolutely necessary to get it in the box. It is a great convenience to the printer if the reporter writes on the unruled side of the paper. Write plainly and be careful about punctuation, as the use or misuse of a comma may determine the meaning of a sentence.

That the editor may estimate the quality of your work and have some basis from which to make appointment, it is of importance that you put your name on the back of the paper.

Students who are not members of the journalism class and who have items for the paper, should put them in the iron box attached to the wall on the east side of the hall. The wooden box on the opposite side of the hall is reserved for the journalism class.

One hundred and sixty-seven students have registered for gym work, but many have been slow in reporting for class work. No one should be negligent in this matter as their attendance will be kept account of and reported to the registrar the same as in other classes.
