Nebraska Men Leave for Minneapolis—Rooters Give Them Enthusiastic Send-off With Cheers.

The team left for Minneapolis at 6:15 last night, via the B. & M. At 2 o'clock the men met on the field for practice and at 4:45 supper was served at the training table.

About 200 rooters collected at the depot, and about twenty-five managed to get up enough enthusiasm to give the men a good send-off. Operations were begun by giving the good old Uni yell, and soon a crowd collected along the special car and cheered the men until the train departed. The yelling was led by Riley and Davidson. Every individual member of the team received official notice of the fact that he was all right and then "the whole bunch" was declared to be in the favor of the assembled multitude. Jack Best and the coaches came in for their share of the praise, and for twenty minutes the yelling that went on would have done credit to a crowd twice as large. The only trouble seemed to be that the majority preferred to stand around and hear the few enthusiasts yell, while they did nothing themselves.

Coach Booth was called for and appeared before his audience. He modestly presented himself on the platform and with a graceful bow and bewitching smile disappeared within the car. Captain Westover in like manner made his appearance. Then, as the rest of the heroes declined to leave their seats, they were forced to show themselves at the windows. Finally Coach Palmer was discovered sneaking through the crowd and was immediately tossed several times, after which he was escorted to the platform on the shoulders of the crowd. As the train pulled out the yells again resounded in the air and every man in the party went away feeling that whether the team won or not there were loyal supporters at home who would appreciate their best efforts.

All the men in the first squad are in good condition and capable of playing the hardest game ever put up by the varsity. What the result will be we will leave for Saturday to decide.

One or two scrubs laid off the other afternoon for the first time since practice commenced last month. That day the scrubs scored on the first team and earned a supper for the team—as promised by the coaches. Those who laid off are naturally feeling rather glum because they were not in the game and at the supper.

After a theater party at "The Storks" last night, Miss Edith Locke entertained at a chafing-dish party in honor of Miss May de Sousa, the leading lady.

Moon Eclipsed.

The total eclipse of the moon last night attracted much attention among outsiders as well as among students. The observatory was open from 10 to 12 and was crowded with people who wished to view the phenomenon. Dr. Swezey's astronomy classes were out taking observations for their class work.

The totality of the eclipse lasted one hour and twenty-nine minutes. This was possible because the eclipse was almost central.

The following table shows the time of the different phases of the eclipse:

Moon entered penumbra.....	9:17
Moon entered shadow.....	10:17
Total eclipse commenced.....	11:19
Total eclipse ended.....	12:48
Moon left penumbra.....	2:50

The program attending the inauguration of Dr. Frank Strong as chancellor of Kansas University will begin Tuesday, October 14th. The inauguration will take place Friday. Saturday will be wholly given up to athletic contests, including the finals in tennis between representatives from Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, and a football game between Kansas and Drake.

Seminar work in American history is experiencing quite an impetus this year. Not only has Professor Caldwell added a seminar to his "Recent Problems" course, and Mr. Cook one on constitutional law, and Mr. Persinger one on American political philosophy, but the attendance on the older seminar work has increased. Students in this line of work in the department now number thirty-eight—a little more than three times the membership of any recent year.

NEW PROM. COMMITTEE

President Meyers Appoints Members for Important Class Affair—Other Committees.

President Myers of the junior class has named the junior prom. committee. The junior prom. takes place near the end of the semester and is considered the most elaborate society function of the year in university circles.

The appointments are made this early in the year in order that plenty of time may be given the members of the committee for their arrangements. The date will be announced later. The Lincoln hotel is generally the place where the party is given.

The committee named by President Myers is an especially representative one and those composing it assure the function's success. The members are all well known throughout the university, and have been selected only after thorough work by Mr. Myers.

No labor will be spared to make the promenade this year a complete success in every way. It is the intention that it shall be the most elaborate affair in the history of the institution. It is understood that those having the affair in charge will make a statement as to expenditures and receipts.

The committee is:

A red-tailed hawk has been caught by the Lincoln high school boys on the university campus. The hawk has been hunting sparrows around the university for several days, and during the football game was seen to perch on a tree. The boys gave chase, and as it flew away it struck a telephone wire, which stunned it sufficiently so that it was captured. The geological department took photographs of it yesterday.

Junior Football.

Wednesday's class meeting seems to have accomplished its end. Heretofore juniors have failed to appear on the gridiron at chapel time for football practice. Yesterday Newton, Walton, Melick, Myers, Wilson, Allen, Bell, Johnson and Pritchard were out and learned the signals. Prospects for a good team are flattering. The first seven of these men have all been on the class team before and Johnson and Pritchard are high school men of football reputation. Games will probably be scheduled with Doane, York and the Kearney Military Academy. The latter was defeated by the sophomores last year 6 to 0. The junior academics and junior saws will contest for honors tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Mr. Fred W. Park, last year of the American history department, but at present representing the Howard Stove company, has taken charge of the Sunday school class taught by his former colleague, Mr. L. Aylesworth, last year at the Vine Street Congregational church. Mr. Park expects to return to his work in the university at the beginning of next semester.

Prof. George E. Howard, known and respected of all old students of history in the university, is announced by the October number of the American Historical Review as the author of one volume in the twenty-six volume "Monographic History of the United States," which Prof. A. B. Hart will edit and Harper Bros. will probably publish during the next three years. Professor Howard's volume will deal with the "Preliminaries of the American Revolution."

One of the faculty has aptly described the "snap-seeking" student as one who wishes to "move along the line of least resistance."
