The Week's Convocations.

The following is the program for convocation hour for the ensuing week:

Friday, Nov. 7—Music.

As the end of the football season approaches the debating season begins. There is always something to interest the student body.

The social season of the university as to class and like affairs will be inaugurated tonight. The Sophomores lead with their hop, and have reason to expect it to be a success in every way.

The co-eds who will go out and watch football practice these cold afternoons are setting an exceptional example to many of their sterner brothers who seek warmer places than the bleachers.

Two men of the university who have gone to eastern schools have distinguished themselves this year in athletics, taking high places at Princeton and at Cornell. The university needs more of this kind of men at home.

Nebraska is characterized by its unique order of chapel exercises. All colleges do not have this feature every day. The students have the opportunity of getting some valuable information by their attendance every morning.

The question is often asked among singers, "Why are there so few tenors?" This is an important question in the chorus, particularly the advanced. Male singers are scarce anyway and when it comes to those with higher pitched voices—well they're not there.

The longer the Daily lives the longer the exchange list grows. There are several hundred college publications in this country and most of them are willing to exchange with the best ones. Applications are continually coming to the office from papers who wish to be placed upon the exchange list.

The college world is generally being stirred up over the question as to how much an individual needs as a college education, what that shall be, how much time should be required for graduation and how much entrance credit should be allowed. Someone who can solve these questions will bestow a blessing on a good many who are the most interested.

We note with pleasure a gradual improvement in the work of the journalism class. In the past several members of the class have kicked because their work was not published. When they began to realize that the fault was all their own and paid more attention to what they wrote and how they wrote it then they began to see their items occasionally in the paper. Those that have been started on the right track in this way are doing good work. There are some, however, whose chief object seems to be to fill up paper and if possible get credit.

The first thing to be considered is what to write. Cultivate the faculty of knowing what the students like to read. Develop the news instinct. Yesterday among the papers which came to the office from the journalism class a four-page paper was found with so-called "news" on four or five different subjects. Not an item was suitable for the paper. There was another paper with two items and under them a note which read: "To the reader—I made my run and there was no news at all. It is a bum run."

Both items went into print. The first student did not know what news is, the other one did. The moral is obvious.

The next thing is how to write well. Punctuate, capitalize properly, do not abbreviate, spell correctly, write plainly (especially names of persons and places). The editor is weary and when he receives a poorly written article his natural instinct is to throw it into the waste basket. He must be short on news indeed if he stirs up energy enough to rehash the article.

Minor Games Yesterday.

Two interesting, close and hotly contested games of football were played on the university grounds yesterday afternoon. The second Lincoln High School eleven defeated the Freshmen and Academy with scores of 6 to 0 and 5 to 0. Only ten-minute halves were played. A crowd of seventy-five witnessed the contests.

The Freshmen and High School competed for honors first. The former excelled in the first half. They made an uninterrupted march for their opponents' goal until held for downs on the two-yard line. The High School pushed the ball out of danger, but it remained in their territory the rest of the half, which ended 0 to 0.

The High School turned the tables on the Freshmen in the second half. They went through their line and around their ends with such speed as to fairly take their antagonists off their feet and Calvin was pushed over for a touchdown after four minutes of play. The goal was kicked. The Freshmen took a brace and the game ended with the ball in the High School's territory.

The High School and Academy then lined up. The grounds had to be turned over to the first team before the first half was finished.

While the High School got the better of the Preps throughout, the Academy, at times, put up a remarkable defense and did some spectacular tackling. The Academy's ends were weak and the High School took advantage of this in a way that netted them gains of from ten to thirty-five yards.

After seven minutes of play Munn of the High School skirted left end for twenty yards and a touchdown. The goal was not kicked. Time was soon called with the ball in the center of the field and the score 5 to 0 in favor of the High School.

Dudgeon, Toomey and Myers were the Academy stars; Munn, Calvin and McWilliams did the work for the High School, while Johnson and Englehart were the best ground gainers for the Freshmen.

Young men, the suit opportunity of your life is at Armstrong's today.
