Some members of the journalism class are copying notes from the Nebraskan and other papers and handing them in. Such work is worthless to the paper.

It was talked about the university that the scrubs would play the Bellevue College team on the home grounds yesterday or next Monday. This was a false report, since no return game has been arranged with Bellevue for any date this season.

The Academy football team has disbanded. While they did not win a game this year, they need not be ashamed of their record, as they could hardly be expected to win from the teams with which they played. Next year they will be able to make a better showing.

It has been discovered that the people who have been seen at the windows of the main hall during football games have a right to be there. They have been admitted with tickets and for special obvious reasons. The rooms on that side of University hall have always been locked during games and those who occupied places at the windows have been given the right by the football and university authorities. This will clear up a misunderstanding which has worried some people.

The university public will unite with the athletic board in asking Coach Booth to remain with the university another year. Nebraska owes her success in the last three years in a great part to his exceptionally level headed coaching. He has been one of those men who inspire confidence and contend successfully against adverse circumstances. The university could justly go into mourning if he should leave at the time when Nebraska needs him to aid in maintaining her reputation.

Besides having an enviable record as master of the gridiron, he has also taken great interest in other college affairs, most notably, the play of last year. At present he is devoting more time to another like piece of work. Verily Nebraska needs more such men, and can not afford to lose him.

The students of Iowa object to being required to work on Saturdays to "make up" their holidays. The following editorial appeared in the Daily Iowan:

"The action of the senate in requiring Saturday work after vacations and intermissions is robbing Peter to pay Paul. They give up a holiday and then take one away to make up for this generosity."

The railroads of Michigan will grant a one and one-third rate for students who go home to spend Thanksgiving. Why should the railroads of Nebraska not offer a similar rate? If the fare were reduced a large number of students would spend Thanksgiving at home, but the recess is too short for them to be willing to pay full fare. As it is, only those whose homes are a short distance from Lincoln have the pleasure of eating their Thanksgiving dinners at their fathers' tables.

Dean Reese at Chapel.

Dean Reese spoke at convocation yesterday morning on the recent supreme court decision regarding the use of the Bible, and sectarian instruction in the public schools. He said that he was not there to criticize the action of the supreme court, but rather to explain what the decision was. He held that nearly every one had a mistaken conception of what the court passed on, and if the matter was better understood criticisms would be less harsh.

He first explained the composition of the court and how, on account of so many cases coming before it, they were disposed of by the aid of the supreme court commission. The work of the commission is divided into three departments and each department is put in charge of three commissioners. It is the duty of the commissioners to write opinions on the cases given them, from the pleading of the cases and the argument offered. These opinions are then submitted to the judges, three in number, and upon the concurrence of two of them the opinions are accepted or rejected. The judgment is then rendered, which is final.

He said that the constitution of the state of Nebraska prohibited the teaching of sectarianism in the public schools. He then briefly stated the case upon which the court had passed, and the points upon which they had rendered their decision.

A teacher in a county school in one of the counties of the state had been reading the Bible daily, offering prayer and singing sacred songs. This, in itself, the dean said, was not illegal, but the teacher testified in court that she did this for the purpose of teaching sectarianism. Therefore the court rendered a decision against the teacher.

Many unsuccessful attempts have been made to manufacture syrup from beets. The chemistry department is now in receipt of samples of syrup from a manufactory at Sioux City, Ia. Professor Nicholson is requested to inspect the samples for the company.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon at University hall was well attended and exceptionally interesting and enthusiastic. Special music was a part of the program.

New hustlers who win places on the reportorial staff of the Daily Maroon will receive, as badges of distinction, five pointed stars enameled in maroon. These will be in the form of a button to be worn on the lapel of the coat by the men, and a pin for young women.

The Chicago Sunday Tribune contained "Deacon" Koehler's picture.

The Japanese students of Yale have organized a debating club.

Beloit College is rejoicing over the return of President Eaton, after a year's absence abroad.

For students entering Swiss universities, Greek used to be obligatory, but may now be replaced by a modern language; German and French are absolutely necessary, but the student may choose a minimum of two other languages among Hebrew, Greek, English and Italian.

The eagerness of the government to secure men trained in plant pathology is shown by the fact that P. J. O'Gara, who lately passed the government examination, was asked to report next Thursday at a station in one of the southern states. Mr. O'Gara finds it impossible to leave his work here at present, and expects to report December 1st to the department at Washington.

Chancellor Andrews and the faculty of the Omaha Medical College of the university, will tender a reception to the citizens of Omaha on Friday evening, December 5th, at the Millard hotel.

Next week Dr. and Mrs. Clements start for New York, where they are to study for a month in the herbarium of the New York botanical garden. While in the east they will attend the meetings of the Botanical Society of America, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in Washington. They intend to return in time for the opening of work immediately after the holidays.
