Staff Editorials.

The new interclass athletic rules that are published in this issue of The Nebraskan are an advance over any movement ever taken in the University along the line of athletics. A need of some such rules to govern class contests has been felt for several years, at least since University athletics have been brought up to the present high standard. The rules provide for the control of all interclass games by a board chosen from the various classes, similar to the athletic board of the University. This arrangement, when carried into effect, ought to insure harmonious action among the classes and give to the whole a definite and permanent purpose. Although such a move is new in Nebraska, the idea has been carried out completely in the eastern universities where athletics maintain a very high standard. In Michigan, all interclass athletic contests are controlled by the athletic board itself. The rules that were recently adopted here were patterned after those of other institutions where a definite understanding exists between the classes. The athletic editor of The Nebraskan deserves much credit for introducing the system in University athletics.

While it is the object of The Nebraskan to deal out University news, fresh and reliable, and the duty of its editors to sweep the campus for every vestige of interesting information, there is nevertheless, a responsibility on the part of every student and member of the faculty to make known to the staff anything that happens in his vicinity. Every one owes this, not to the daily paper, but to his fellows. The reporters cannot be everywhere and see everything, for they, too, are busy. They have lessons to work out and classes to attend. If those who have news of any kind to report, whether local or personal, would kindly send in a note or "put the reporters on" the favor would be appreciated both by the staff and the public.

U. of M. Daily: The Pennsylvanian, the daily published by the University of Pennsylvania students, has been changed from a daily to a "five-day affair," with no more Saturday issues. The step was taken at the instance of the bureau of advertising, which gives as its reason the lack of interest on the part of the undergraduates. The advertisers do not get the worth of their money and the bureau will not allow the paper to continue on the advertising prospects. A special appeal has been made to the undergraduates of that institution, who ought to respond with their active assistance and co-operation.
