There are a certain number of boys in the University who make a custom of "staggering" it to almost every University dance. There are only two possible reasons why this is done, and only one excuse. When a "stag" is seen at a dance it either means that he could not get a girl or that he did not want to stand for the extra expense that might ensue from taking a girl. It is to be regretted that too often it is because of the latter reason that so many go to dances alone. Anybody who has made an honest effort to get a girl is excusable, and only then. The excuse is sometimes offered that unless there are a large number of "stags" many of the girls will have to sit out dances. This is true to a certain extent, but it is usually the "stags" who make the greatest efforts to get dances with the popular girls, and so the other girls sit out dances anyway. The custom is growing in the University and should be discouraged. At the last dance the number was greater than ever before, and it was very noticeable that they were, for the most part, fellows who have done the same thing more than once.

That University society people are sometimes deficient in manners was very noticeable in the way in which the programs were secured Friday night at the company B hop. The matter has been touched upon before in these columns, but will bear mentioning again. The trouble was probably due to thoughtlessness more than anything else, but might have ended seriously. Several people who thought they had special privileges started the thing, and everybody else helped it along. Not satisfied with raising a rough house, several were greedy enough to stuff several programs in their pockets, although they had no need for them whatever. If they had been content to get their programs in the ordinary way there would have been no confusion or trouble, and there would have been plenty to go around. Some stringent means should be taken to prevent a repetition in the future, while dance managers should make better preparations for distribution of programs.

Friday's dailies: The University of Iowa enjoys the distinction of having the only chapter of the fraternity of the Scimitar and Fez, an order chartered by Abdul Hamid II., sultan of Turkey, in the United States. The members of the chapter are eight members of the senior class of the college of liberal arts. They appeared in chapel this morning in long cloaks and wearing turbans. Their left cheeks were painted in green and gold and bore the scimitar, while on their right cheeks appeared the blood-red fez.

Dennis Says He is Willing.

I see by the papers that some of the "big professors" do not think much of the Rhodes scholarships because Oxford is a little slow and has not kept up with the times. On this account they say there is trouble in finding fellows who are willing to accept the offer of $1,500 a year for three years. For fear that Mr. Rhodes will not rest easy in H— (some orthodox people say that they don't know which place he is in), and although a little of the dust of the ages has gathered upon the profs of dear old Oxford and a little moss upon her ancient walls, I am willing to go, and by the practice of strict economy will try and get along on only $1,500 a year. If necessary, I will cook my own porridge and not eat English beefsteak more than four times a day. Say, Mr. Editor, as it is getting near the end of the University year, and my pile is a little low, I wish you would just tell the committee if they will send a certified check or a New York draft for $4,500, I will pack up my "bag," turn up my pantaloons, and be ready to start at once. If it will make no difference, ask the committee if I could stay here till commencement, for one of the senior girls has smiled twice on me lately and I would like to stay till June, and maybe she would go with me, then I know that we could live on $1,500 per year, for some people say that two can live cheaper than one. If not asking too much, the committee can send the draft to

DENNIS,

Care of The Nebraskan.

P. S.—I've just been looking in the family bible, and I find that I am over 23 years of age, but I am under 50, and expect to live twenty-three years yet. Don't you think a person can learn after he is 23? I am sure I can pass the exams at Oxford, especially if the fossil profs will only be kind enough to tell me the question the day before the exams.

This rather surprising item appears in the last number of the Oberlin Review: "The Daily Iowan now appears in somewhat different form, and different typographically. It is the composite result of the union of the Hesperian, the Nebraskan and the Scarlet and Cream." As usual, "go away from home to learn the news." The exchange editor's pen evidently made a slip.

Yesterday's Exercises:

Our reporter missed out on convocation yesterday, but we learn enough of the session second-hand to know that a large crowd thoroughly enjoyed the original poems of the "thin, grey-haired" poet-philosopher of the State Journal, Mr. A. L. Bixby.

Many students are beginning to discover that I do not charge for my "name," but simply make good clothes. My prices are within the reach of all. Ask R. C. Pollard or J. D. Barry. L. A. Bumstead, new location, 120 North 12th St.

Academy Notes.

If the renowned Nesbit can teach French in six weeks as she is spoken "in gay Paree," the Academy faculty are about ready to pack their grips and go into farming or some other less strenuous occupation.

New students continue to enroll, notwithstanding the difficulties of picking up courses after six weeks of the semester have passed. Messrs. F. W. Cattel of Seward, and Peter Peterson of Emerson, the latter a brother of the University senior of that name, both enrolled yesterday.

The Social Hour club will introduce a departure from the usual program at the meeting Thursday afternoon at the meeting Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at 700 north 16th Street, in that the officers and members will give a reception to all young women in any way connected with the Academy. As usual light refreshments will be served.
