The student who "means well" frequently lives beyond his means.

This is the season of prevailing temporary illness. Students should be unusually careful in the care they take of themselves, and thus guard against an epidemic. Several cases of mumps have already been reported. Care should be exercised on the part of students in not allowing this disease to spread.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath"; and from a back seat it frequently saves an embarrassing flunk.

Talk about class spirit! At Monday night's basket ball game there were only three seniors and some half dozen freshmen present. Certainly something was lacking somewhere. Those few present were very enthusiastic, but the trouble was there were not enough of them. There is still a chance for the seniors to redeem themselves. Let them cheer up and show themselves equal to the occasion.

A dollar in the appropriation bill is worth two in the committee of the whole.

Now that the baseball men are out, it is the duty of every man who has any ability in this line to report on the field at once, without being asked. Nebraska must put out a winning aggregation. To do this will be a weighty task. Only a few old men are back and several positions are open. According to present indications competition will not be very strong for the bases or infield. Fielders are very numerous.

"Where there's a will, there's a way," but what of it when there are two wills—the instructor's and the student's?

The class basket ball games have not all been played. The championship lies between the juniors and freshmen. The juniors have a strong and experienced team, but the under classmen put up a swift and snappy game, and will probably give their opponents a hard rub. The date of the final contest has not yet been set, but the game will probably occur the first of next week. The freshmen refused to play this week, as they desired to have another week's practice before hazarding their chances for the championship.

Yale is discussing the question of how to bring the freshmen, who now "form a little community by themselves," according to the Yale News, into closer touch with the remainder of the university, without breaking down time-honored class lines.

Convocation Notes

Program for the Week:

Thursday—Miss Howell: Reading.
Friday—Musical program.
Chaplain for the week, Rev. L. P. Ludden.

Yesterday's Exercises:

State Superintendent Fowler addressed the student body at yesterday's convocation upon the subject of the Cincinnati meeting of school superintendents, as follows: Three weeks ago a rather remarkable meeting was held in the city of Cincinnati where were gathered several hundred school superintendents and others high in educational work, among them Mrs. Helen L. Grenfell of Colorado, the only lady representative, and President Charles W. Elliot of Harvard. The topics discussed were many and various, such as the human scale of geography, the best methods of electing school boards, the freedom of the teacher, industrial education in the rural schools, the University of Oxford and the Rhodes scholarships, co-education in high schools and universities, how to utilize fully the plant of a city school system, etc.

The superintendents are, in the main, a fine body of men. A majority of them have worked up to the positions they now hold by thorough merit and strong personality. The position of principal of city schools in such cities as Omaha and Lincoln, is more important than that of college president of a generation ago. All the colleges in the land forty years ago did not equal in point of attendance or in number of instructors a like number of high schools of the present day. More important still, however, is the position of superintendent of a city system of schools. There are one hundred sixty-one cities of the United States containing a population of over 25,000, with the salaries of superintendents ranging from $2,000 to $10,000.

The differences between the views of the superintendents of the east and of the middle or central west were very marked. The question was asked, "What should be the features of a modern elementary school building?" and upon this question the men of the east exhibited general ignorance, many of them stating that it was not the part of a superintendent's duties to inform himself upon the subjects of heating, ventilation, lighting, etc., of school buildings; while the men of the west displayed a knowledge of these subjects and held them as important as methods of instruction.

If you are preparing for educational work, Superintendent Fowler advised in conclusion, study all the influences which tend to educate the child, and develop his physical, intellectual and spiritual organization. The teacher, the text book, the school houses and their appurtenances, all should be made objects of study and reflection by the future superintendents and supervisors and principles of schools.

SOPHOMORE baseball men report on field this morning at chapel time.

ALL freshmen who can and are willing to play base ball will meet on the base ball field Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. All freshmen be sure and get out.—Committee.

ALL freshmen who intend to enter the freshman-sophomore debate must hand their names to the president of the freshman class before Thursday evening, March 19.

Professor Barber is busily engaged in reading the proof of the new Hale and Buck Latin grammar that is being printed by Ginn & Co., of Boston. He read the manuscript before it went to the printers, and is now on the fourth and last reading of the proof. The grammar was gotten up by Hale and Buck of Chicago University, and the indications are that it will become the most popular Latin grammar in the country.

The Theophanian literary society of Wesleyan will pay the Delians a return visit Friday evening. Holding in mind the hospitable treatment accorded to them upon their recent visit to the Wesleyan society, the Delians will spare no pains in providing suitable entertainment for their visitors.

"Do you know any news?" asked the Nebraskan reporter of the professor.

"Yes," growled the professor, "but I won't give it to you."

"I didn't ask you to give it to me," replied the reporter; "I just wanted to find out if you knew any."
