The program rendered by the lady members of the senior class at convocation yesterday was a pleasing and striking innovation in the way of class functions. Being the first time that such an attempt has been made by any portion of any class collectively, much curiosity and interest was manifested as to its outcome. The measure of its success was attested by the presence of the large crowd and the marked approbation with which each part of the program was received. The undertaking was wholly an experiment, and its successful outcome redounds to the credit of those who arranged it, as well as of those who participated. By the success of this attempt on the part of the senior ladies, the way is opened for other classes to follow their example. Such a precedent is certainly a good one, and it is to be hoped that it will not be allowed to stand alone.

It is unfortunate that such a disagreement should arise as exists between the juniors and the freshmen over the result of Tuesday evening's basket ball game. Both parties have valid claims—the freshmen because the final score was in their favor, and the juniors because they were ahead at the time when the last half should have closed. Naturally there is considerable feeling on the part of both, and any decision as to which side is entitled to the game would be productive of dissatisfaction and disappointment to the losers. Accordingly the only logical solution of the problem is to follow out Dr. Clapp's suggestion and play the game over again. This would be the fairest way to decide as to the relative merits of the two teams and to settle their respective claims of superiority.

The question has been raised as to why a lunch room should not be provided for the boys in the University. Many of them who live at a distance are obliged to bring their lunches with them each day and are often inconvenienced by lack of a proper place to partake of them. Some use the Y. M. C. A. rooms for this purpose, and others the steps of the main hall or library, or other places about the campus. A lunch room similar to that now used by the girls would be suitable for their needs and a great convenience as well.

Considerable complaint is being made of the actions of certain pupils, who are accustomed to borrow notebooks from the shelves of certain departments. We do not like to believe that any students care to pursue such methods in getting their work done.

Not Settled Yet.

University athletic circles are still more or less excited over the endeavor of the juniors to wrest the year's championship in basket ball away from the freshmen. Opinion on the affair seems to be pretty evenly divided. Those accustomed to athletic ways justify the claim of the juniors, asserting that in such a close game two or three minutes more or less may decide the whole thing. Others regard the effort of the juniors as a little unsportsmanlike—a desire to make use of mere technicalities to save the class reputation. All appear to agree that a fifteen-minute half was agreed upon, and that at the end of the fifteen minutes the juniors were in the lead. No settlement of the dispute was reached yesterday, though interested groups might be run across in various places, all vigorously engaged in discussion of the subject. The decision may come finally through a reference of the whole affair to the inter-class athletic board—although there is no clause in the inter-class constitution covering the case—or possibly through the re-playing of the disputed game. The former method might, justly or unjustly, lay the decision open to the charge of being influenced by class jealousies, while the latter would enable the two classes to line up teams with enough changes in personnel to produce an altogether different score than before.

The present disagreement illustrates anew a difficulty that will probably be more or less frequently met with until class athletics are differently managed. In Michigan, interclass athletics are under the supervision of the regular collegiate athletic board, and their rules form a part of the athletic board's constitution. If such were the case here, the decision of a question like the present one could be accepted as unbiased. As it is, the only reasonable way of settling the dispute now seems to be the playing of the game over again—a solution which it seems ought to be agreeable to both the classes involved.

Yesterday's Exercises:

The senior girls' program at convocation yesterday morning attracted one of the largest audiences of the school year. Religious exercises were led by Miss Laura Weldy. The piano solo by Miss Ethel Syford received marks of high appreciation from the audience. Miss Bessie Belle Brown gave a reading from Richard Harding Davis, "Traver's First Hunt," and in response to a prolonged encore, rendered a second selection, "My Sister's Best Fellow." Miss May Belle Hagenow closed the program with a violin group which was heartily applauded, and would have met with an unabated encore had the bell not already rung for the close of the hour. All were pleased with the successful efforts of the senior girls, and congratulated them upon securing such an interesting program for the occasion.

Men's Negligee Shirts.

New Spring Lines.

The sale of the "Eagle Shirts" is confined to us for Lincoln, so the patterns are exclusive and that's a point always appreciated.

These soft shirts, worn by many men the year around for business, must be comfortable first of all. The "Eagle Shirts" are bound to suit in this respect—loose where they should be loose and fitting where they should fit. The neckbands are the same size after being washed as before, guaranteed to be non-shrinkable.

The material is soft, fine Madras in neat, clean-looking stripes and figures or in plain reds and blues, full of character and style.

The Eagle Shirt is sure to suit particular men.
