April Fool Joke.

Yesterday was the first of April and a little incident occurred in the law school to commemorate the day. When Professor Robbins' class was dismissed at 9 o'clock they found posted on the door a list of names of those who "passed" the preliminary exam in agencies a few days ago. A few were especially good men and some men of the other kind. So elated were they at the thought that they congratulated themselves and considerable boasting followed. It developed later, however, that the list was a fake, put up as a joke on a few who "bit" nicely. Those gentlemen disappeared from the University and were not again seen on the campus during the entire day.

School of Agriculture Notes.

In the fall of 1902 the department of agriculture made the initial selections and plantings for a series of experiments in "plant improvement," plant breeding of small grains. In the plant nursery there are nine hundred and seventy-five little plots of wheat. One hundred and seventy-five of these are the first generation from crosses made in the summer of 1902. The rest are for selections of the following classes: high and low nitrogen, high and low specific gravity, increased yield and quality, improved straw characteristics, causes of different coloration in the berry, problems of heredity, relation of yield to leaf area and habits of growth, stooling characteristics. Each centgener, or small plot, contains a varying number of individual plants planted six by six inches. Every centgener and each individual plant is numbered, the number being the name by which the plants are known in the crop history books. Mr. Alvin Keyser, a junior in the technical agricultural course in the University, will be in charge of the work during the coming summer. It will be remembered that Mr. Keyser spent the greater part of last summer at the Minnesota experiment station, where he studied successfully the art of plant improvement under the direction of Professor Hays.

Mr. McReynolds, the janitor at the main building, has resigned and will leave some time this month.

A series of spring insatutes is to be held this month in Minnesota. Mr. Stillson, a Nebraska institute man, is to be one of the workers.

Owing to a scarcity of land, the horticultural department has been compelled to remove some apple trees to make room for vegetable experiments.

Mr. B. I. Dill has temporary charge of the nursery work. Mr. Carlyle, the new foreman, has been detained on account of the pressure of spring work at the Jefferson county nurseries.

Several visitors from the University watched the class in dairy husbandry II, last Saturday. They seemed interested and always ready to taste the cream and butter. Visitors are always welcomed to this department, as well as to any other, when practical demonstrations are being made in the laboratories.

Junior-Sophomore Debate.

The junior and sophomore teams for the interclass championship debate met yesterday morning to choose a question for the final debate. Several questions were proposed, but no selection was made. The teams will meet again this morning. The aim is to get a thoroughly up-to-date question and one which will be worthy of investigation. The teams are pretty evenly matched and no doubt the debate will be one of the most hotly contested that the University has ever witnessed. Both classes have selected teams which they are confident will win and the teams themselves are determined to fight hard for the honors. The debate is bound to excite much class enthusiasm, for the debaters are already receiving encouragement from their class members.
