A Few Lines From Mexico.

From a personal letter of Mr. Alfred B. Lyon, academic '95, and law '01, dated Tonalá, Chiapas, Mexico, March 16th, we are permitted to quote the following interesting extracts: "I have been connected with the building of the much talked of Pan-American railroad. The link we are building extends from the Isthmus of Tehuantepec to the frontier of Guatemala, a distance of about 525 kilometers. Then we are to build into the center of this state (Chiapas), and perhaps on up to the capital of the state of Oaxaca; which will, when the Guatemala roads are completed, give continuous rail service from New York and Washington to Guatemala City. * * * Except in the larger cities, nearly all transactions, even involving thousands of dollars, are made in silver. I have spent a half-day making a 'deal,' requiring but a few thousand dollars, that we could readily finish at home in fifteen minutes. * * * Millions of American capital (not to mention that of other nations) are being invested annually in Mexican mines. Americans control the railroads, with few exceptions, and are rapidly invading all ranches of business. A few years ago everything in Mexico City was French and German; now it is American. 'American hotel,' 'American barber shop,' 'American made,' and 'English spoken here,' are signs you encounter everywhere. American machinery and American methods are used everywhere, and this in spite of the fact that the people seem to be very jealous and many seemingly very envious of us. Americans here tell me that the result of the Spanish-American war completely revolutionized sentiment in Mexico."

Miss Madge Ames, '02, who is teaching at Albion, is visiting with her parents and University friends during her spring vacation.

"Anecdotes of Longfellow's 'King Roberts of Sicily'" is the title of an article by Mr. Hjalmar Edgren, formerly of the University faculty, and now of Sweden, in the current number of the American Quarterly.

During the past week the following teaching alumni of the University have been observed by our alumni reporter as spring vacation visitors to their alma mater: Eva McCune, '00, Beatrice; C. M. Teach, '02, David City; Clare Fowler, '02, Minden; Harvey Garrett, '02, Beatrice; R. C. Lansing, '99, Rock Rapids, Ia.; Eliza Scherzer, '98, Scribner; Lottie C. Worley, '98, Red Cloud; A. A. Steele, '98.

LOST—April 2nd, a brown purse containing $7 or $8 in paper, some small opals, jade bead, etc. Return to G. A. Loveland, Nebraska hall, and receive reward.

Dr. J. M. Coulter, professor of botany in the Chicago University, was at the University yesterday, and spoke to several classes in botany. He was expected at 8:30 in the morning, but did not arrive until about 10:00. At chapel time he addressed a large audience of students in the botany lecture room, and then went immediately to the Lincoln high school, where he spoke to the students of that institution. The afternoon was spent about the city and University, and the evening at the Lincoln hotel, where the Nebraska association of alumni of the Chicago University held their fourth annual reunion. Professor Coulter is the author of a large number of text books on botany, and is well known throughout the entire country. While at the University he told the students about some special investigations that have been carried on at Chicago. There they are overhauling some work done years ago, and have found that the original discoveries, which created quite a sensation at the time, were incorrect. Dr. Coulter is the guest of Professor and Mrs. Bessey while here.
