Editorial Remarks

The committee on arrangements of the Ellen Smith memorial are anxious to have a large number of the alumni send in short memorial notes for the meeting next Friday. All of these communications will be arranged in good form and put in the historical library, and a representative part printed in a small volume and distributed among alumni and friends. The plan is one that ought to meet the approval and enlist the co-operative efforts of all graduates of the University who have known Miss Smith and are aware of the great good she did for the institution while acting as registrar. Little memorials, from those who knew Miss Smith, written from various points of view, will represent, as nothing else could, the regard the late registrar enjoyed, her popularity among the friends of the University, and the gratification of all for the sacrificing efforts of the lady who was both friend and advisor to every student in the institution while she was in the registrar's office.

"Keep off the grass!" The warning note has been sounded many times before and it seems it is necessary to keep harping at the old song. It is all in the line of beautifying the campus and keeping it the prettiest place in town, and the authorities need the co-operation of every student.

We are asked if "knocks" on The Nebraskan will be accepted for next Saturday's edition. Most assuredly. We've received so many in the last three months that a few thousand more won't cut much figure one way or another. All we ask is the privilege of retaining a little space in the issue for knocks on other subjects. If you've a kick coming on The Nebraskan, by all means send it along. It will relieve your feelings, and the paper will profit by it.

The law students certainly set the good example in the matter of rooting for their team. When everyone else is silent, the laws keep things going, and their men play all the better ball as a result. There should be a little more excitement and enthusiasm shown in all practice games. If the grandstand showed whether or not it approved of the playing of the men, there would undoubtedly be a change in some of the playing, and the men would take more interest in their work. The crowds are large, but little spirit is shown.

Yesterday's Exercises:

Miss Gail Laughlin, of New York, addressed the students at convocation yesterday morning. She spoke as a student to students, for, she said, not all students are in universities nor are all those who attend universities students. The term "student" is not confined to locality, but applies to any whose minds are engaged in searching for truth and strive to judge of questions and reforms without prejudice.

Women must obey the laws. Therefore, she should have a voice in the making of them since they all apply equally to men and women. The question of food and even the water we drink is a question of politics. She referred to the epidemic among the students of Cornell university which resulted from impure city water and caused the death of so large a number. She said that the condition of the city water was the result of impure politics, and she had noticed that the dirtier the politics a city had generally the dirtier the water also. But she had not noticed that the women had escaped the results of the city legislation for which they were in no way responsible. She did not ask for a government of men and women by women, but a government of men and women by men and women.

We have no argument to meet nor any to be feared. We rely only on the spirit of tradition and prejudice, which will not judge a reform on its merits. This spirit, which up to the middle of the nineteenth century, kept women from a college education, still survives and withholds from her the right of suffrage. The present has advanced beyond these old lines, but the government still reflects the past, when it was even doubted whether women were possessed of souls. Miss Laughlin here told of a council of bishops who debated for several days over this important question and finally, when the vote was taken, it was decided by a majority of one that women really had souls. How fortunate for woman that they had this worthy bishop on their side.

The speaker only asked of the students that they consider this question in fair and unprejudiced mind. If they would do this, she said, there need be no fear as to the way in which the decision would finally be made.

"An Evening in Bonnie Scotland."

Professor Nesbit, who is conducting a five-weeks' course in conversational French in the city, will give an entertainment Thursday night at the First Christian church, Fourteenth and M streets, for the benefit of the college settlement. The entertainment will take the form of "An Evening in Bonnie Scotland," and will consist of character sketches from Ian MacLaren's "Days of Auld Syne," and short dialect readings and anecdotes by Professor Nesbit. Admission will be 25 cents, one-half of the proceeds to go to the college settlement fund. A large audience is hoped for and a pleasant evening promised.

Little Gem hot waffles served at the Merchants' Cafe, 117 North 13th St. We have a large student patronage.

The Steiner-Woempener Drug Co.'s soda fountain, Twelfth and O, has a reputation for cool refreshing drinks. Those delicious ice cream sodas with fruits in season are a delight to students.

you expect to buy a spring suit you'll get fully as good a fit, equally as good fabric, just as much style and suit elegance if you come here for it as though the best tailor in the city fitted you, and you'll save fully ten dollars. If you are some tailor's customer come in, as many other level headed young fellows are doing and try on some of our suits. Your own good judgment will tell you our suits are as good as you will get from any tailor.

Suits $15, $18, $20 and up to $30
