Editorial Remarks

Love's Labor Lost.

College life is a good deal like any other. Some men do the hard work and are liked by the few whom they serve; others do the leadership act and are known of all the world. Of course it can't be helped; but curiosity is bound to ask sooner or later whether it pays to be only a worker. Ask the next man you see lugging chairs, screens, etc., about for a class or society party, if he does the work because it pays, or because he fell into the evil habit when a youth, and can't break away now. As we remarked before, college life is a good deal like other life, and the free horse will continue to be ridden to death, whether or not he appreciates his services to society.

He who crams and gets a grade, may live to wish another made.

You can hear almost anything you want to concerning the way people are receiving the Rockefeller proposition. In the University, the general opinion seems to be that the smallness of the gift, the location of the building off the campus proper, and its use for social and religious purposes alone, will place the donation beyond the necessity of any great criticism by even those opposed on principle to its acceptance. "It's a sort of Baptist college-church, secured by the joint efforts of Mr. Rockefeller and the chancellor; what's the use of raising a row about it?" remarked a member of the faculty yesterday. On the other hand, a number of the prominent men of the city more or less openly express their regret that the University is either called upon or feels inclined to accept a building from this source, and voice their doubts as to the probability of the necessary $33,000 being raised. The real sentiment of the state can be discovered only after the committee begins the work of active canvassing, which it hopes to enter upon very shortly.

College people sometimes seem to forget that there is a certain amount of education to be gotten outside of books.

Convocation Notes

Program for the Week:

Thursday—Mrs. W. G. L. Taylor: "Co-education."
Friday, 10-11 a. m.—Ellen Smith memorial.
Rev. M. W. Lorrimer, chaplain for the week.

Yesterday's Exercises:

Yesterday morning was the occasion of the junior class program at convocation. In the absence of the class president, Vice President Borg presided. The juniors came in in a body, and occupied the whole front section, where seats had been reserved for them. Mr. Albert J. Coats led the devotional exercises.

The trombone solo by Mr. Cornell was especially appreciated, and he was called to give a second selection. After this Mr. R. A. Harrison entertained the audience with two readings from Riley: "Down at the Capital," and "Knee Deep in June." In response to a hearty encore, he gave another short reading which was loudly applauded.

The program as a whole was especially attractive and interesting, and was attended by an unusually large audience. The precedent of class programs as set by the seniors is most commendable and one which no doubt will be continued in the future. The sophomores and freshmen are yet to make use of a convocation period each. They are making elaborate preparations and will probably meet the high expectations of other classmen and maintain the good standard that has already been established in class programs.
