Editorial Remarks

The Evening News has been joined by the Lincoln Trade Review, edited by former Postmaster H. M. Bushnell, in the campaign against the Rockefeller gift. Mr. Bushnell says in the last number of the Review: "Personally this paper is frank to say it does not believe the people of the state should be asked to join in a partnership donation of this character. The state University has been and is, generously supported by the tax-paying people of the state. The treatment of the university at the hands of the legislators has been liberal. People have paid their taxes for the University with a cheerfulness only secondary to their pride in the institution, its splendid growth and surpassing standing when compared with other state institutions. The people own the university, every physical atom of it, and they also own the spirit of the institution, and this ownership is infinitely greater, for under the direction of the healthy public sentiment of an educated population the spirit of the University of Nebraska has always been right, untrammelled, uncompromised, and in harmony with the free spirit of the institution, with no shadow of individualism in its completeness. The state of Nebraska has enacted anti-trust laws in efforts to reach trusts of which the Standard Oil company is one. Is there not more than sentiment in the state taking the influence legislated against into at least a semblance of partnership in adding to present university equipment? Will the University be regarded by all the people in just the same light, and will it command the undivided cheerful support of every one so much in the future? We believe the spirit of the University will not be enhanced by partnerships of the proposed character.

Two and one make three, usually; but on a campus bench two and one make one too many.

The practice of reading the morning papers in chapel is a custom that deserves some comment. Yesterday it was necessary for the speaker to "call down" an offending party before proceeding with his lecture. Not only is the practice impolite and indicative of a lack of good breeding, but it is very annoying and embarrassing to the speaker. If you do not care enough about the exercises to pay attention to them, it might be a good idea for you to stay away altogether, and retire to some secluded corner of the campus where you may read your paper in peace and quiet.

Convocation Notes

Program for the Week:

Wednesday—Sophomore class program.
Thursday—F. B. Sanborn: "Emerson."
Friday—Missouri debate mass meeting.
Chaplain for the week: Rev. Laura Wild.

Professor Taylor spoke at convocation yesterday morning on "The United States of Europe." "There is little conception here of the real movement," he said, "and the idea of the United States of America is infectious. All other American republics have copied after us, ours being the first great republic to be established. However, the idea in America is older than we imagine and can be traced back to the time when the competition of American grains was begun to be felt in Europe. The conception of the United States in regard to Europe is closely connected with tariffs and reciprocity treaties. Whenever the period comes about for the renewal of reciprocity treaties the question of whether it would be better to renew the old treaties, or to enter into closer relations, is discussed by the European powers. In 1892, when Germany renewed her reciprocity treaties, the question of a close union with America was brought up, and with the revival in '94 of commercial prosperity the question was again dropped, and so it has been for many years. There are many obstacles in the way of such a union, and although Europe regrets exceedingly that America should be allowed to take the whip hand, as it were, in matters of commercial importance, she cannot very well direct matters otherwise. England, for instance, is a free trade country, and for that reason cannot enter into the union. It is likewise impossible for France to enter into any such agreement. In 1892 her already high tariff rates were still further advanced, and because of her relations with Germany and because she enjoys the benefits of a 'favored nation clause,' she cannot be considered. The proposition has been advanced to make Germany the center of a central union, in which France and England should not be taken into consideration. That is also impossible, because of the favored nation clause existing between France and Germany, and which binds them together. There are several other propositions, all doubtful of accomplishment, however, and it is almost impossible to bring about an agreement."

Daily Iowan: President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, is at work developing a plan of his own which will be an innovation in American universities. He intends to introduce the tutorial system into Princeton, such as is used at Oxford, by which tutors are available for every student in his individual preparation for class room work. It will require twelve and a half million dollars to carry out this project effectively, but President Wilson is sure of raising that amount.

University Bulletin

THE U. B. D. C. will not meet Saturday evening, owing to the May day program of the Union society occurring on that evening.

STOCK JUDGING CLASS will meet for the next exercise in Watson & Woods Bros' barn, Eighth and R streets, Saturday morning, May 2, at 8 o'clock.

TRACKMEN—All entries for field day, to be held next Saturday, May 2, must be in the hands of the physical director not later than Thursday noon. John Tobin, Captain.

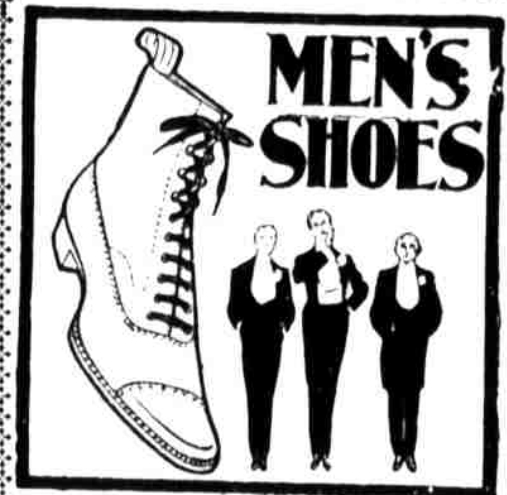

ALL JUNIORS who took Sombrero subscription blanks can have more by seeing R. A. McNowen or E. H. Allen. A Sombrero will be given for every twenty bona fide subscriptions. When all your blanks are filled, sign your name as agent, and leave in charge of either Mr. Allen or Mr. McNowen.

ALL MEN taking regular gymnasium or athletic work may make arrangements for a second physical examination by sending their names to Dr. Clapp. By comparing this second set of measurements with the first set taken, one is able to ascertain the exact muscular development obtained from the year's physical work. All are urged to take the examination.

SENIORS should take notice to order their programs. The orders are very slow in coming in and some tardy ones may obstruct the complete order. Also the cards, it is important that all who wish them see the samples of the Co-op and place their orders. The committee has arranged to have a table in the hall Monday and Tuesday mornings. Those who have not done so up to this time may then place their orders.
