University Calendar.
Thursday, May 7—Home Field Meet.
Friday, May 8—High School Fete
Day. Half holiday.
Friday, May 8, 6:30 p. m.—Y. W. C.
A. hare and hounds chase.

Messrs. Moore and Heck walked to Ashland last Saturday.

A. C. Parsons has been elected principal of the Ft. Calhoun schools for next year.

Librarian J. A. Barrett of the Historical society went to Omaha last evening in the interest of the society.

Miss Annie Jones, '02, now teaching in the Dunbar schools, spent Saturday at the University, visiting her brother and her ex-classmates.

Clem Theobald, '01, now engaged in the insurance business in Madison, Wis., is in the city, calling on friends and former acquaintances.

The usual spring crop of letters containing specimens for naming has begun to reach the botanical department. Already some interesting things have been received.

E. P. Tyner has been chosen as captain of the senior basket-ball team for 1904. As one of the strong and enthusiastic men on last winter's team, the honor is conceded to be a merited one.

Mr. Shimer of Denver stopped off between trains Sunday to visit his nephew, C. E. Shimer. He arrived too late, however, as the latter has departed the morning before with the ball team on its eastern trip.

Rev. John Marshall, of the Gospel Tabernacle, spoke to the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon on the subject "Biblical Basis of Missions." After the address Miss Mercer charmingly sang "I heard the voice of Jesus say."

Secretary Paul of the Debating association has been interviewing students and faculty since Monday morning in an endeavor to wipe out last year's debating deficit. This year's debates have paid for themselves, and it is believed next year's will do the same, so the effort is now being made to start with a clean slate and unhandicapped by ancient debts. Mr. Paul reports a gratifying response to his request for contributions.

Dean Lees leaves tonight for Europe, where he will spend the next four months in travel and research. Mrs. Lees and children will accompany him as far as England, where they will spend a year with Dr. Lees' mother. He will meanwhile visit Sicily and Greece in the interests of the Greek department, and intends taking a large number of photographs of Grecian scenery and monuments. For this purpose he will be accompanied by an expert photographer, in the person of Mr. Newton of Union College. They take their wheels with them to use on their tour wherever the nature of the country permits. During the present month Professors Dann and Elliott will have charge of Dr. Lees' Greek classes.

The June Delineator contains a group of college stories of widely different interest, and each is an excellent bit of fiction. The Taking of Isabel is a pretty story of childhood love realized at the end of college days, written by Catherine Young Glen. Professor Ashur's Tutor by Alice Louise Lee, is the tale of a girl who would not take a dare. The wooing of a scientific maiden is the theme of By Grace of Linnaeus, by Kate Milner Rabb; and A Delayed Proposal, by Kate Whiting Patch, is the story of a romance shattered and renewed on Harvard class days. The stories are finely illustrated by E. M. Ashe, George Gibbs, C. M. Relyea and Karl Anderson.
