Editorial Remarks

We are glad to give space in today's paper to the letter of Mr. E. F. Nelson, the final speaker on the Missouri-Nebraska team Departmental reporting for The Nebraskan is frequently done by more or less interested parties, and may occasionally bear a partisan imprint. Inquiries made by the editor among disinterested hearers of the debate appear to confirm at least the first of the charges denied by Mr. Nelson. Whether intentionally or not, it is quite certain that he left with at least the larger portion of his audience the impression that he meant to accuse Nebraska of repudiating her agreements in the definition of the trust question. However, by the publication of Mr. Nelson's article we give the University public both sides of the controversy, and will permit them to draw therefrom, without further comment, their own conclusions as to the validity of the charges made pro and con.

If our reporter read aright yesterday's signs, the new administration building is destined to occupy the south end of the space between the walks on the Eleventh street front of the campus. The Nebraskan editor lays no claim to being a landscape artist, but is nevertheless strongly of the opinion that when the walls of the new building begin to rise, and gradually shut off the Eleventh street view of the University grounds, people will begin to realize the mistake that has been made. The regents finally decide the matter in their session today. Every one thoughtful of the future of the campus hopes the decision may be made only after a careful consideration of this fact, and that, once made, it may prove itself the wisest possible one.

There is constant need on the athletic field of a large gate, adjoining the smaller one, that may be opened at the close of athletic events. As it is, the present gate is entirely too small to accommodate the crowds who desire to make their exit all at the same time on such occasions. There is such a gate on the south side of the field, but the trouble seems to be that it is never opened. If a little more attention were paid to the matter, it might add greatly to the convenience of the people who attend events on the field.

A man much in attendance on University social functions remarks to The Nebraskan: "While I desire by no means to register a kick against the way class parties have been conducted this year, it is a very noticeable fact that the people who do not dance are not 'in it' when it comes to entertainment. While a card table and a ping-pong set are usually provided for their amusement, something more should be furnished. A little informal program would help some."

Today occurs the annual election of student members to the athletic board. Since this is a matter that concerns everyone in school, each should see to it that he casts a ballot for the five best men on the ticket.

Convocation Program.

Wednesday—Professor Beardslee: "Hartford Seminary."
Thursday—Freshman class program.
Friday—Music.
Rev. J. L. Marshall, chaplain.

I ANNOUNCE myself a candidate for member of the University athletic board, subject to the approval of the student body.—C. P. Mason.

THE Engineering society will hold its regular meeting tonight at 8:00 o'clock in M. 211. L. W. Chase will talk on "Gas Engines" and Norton Hare on "The American Society of Civil Engineers."

THOSE who have subscribed for the Sombrero, and who have not yet received their copy, should procure it at once at one of the book stores. The sale has progressed so well that if you wait till school is out you may not get one. We do not wish to disappoint anyone, but it is almost impossible to look up every one who has subscribed and deliver his book to him.—R. A. McNow.

ELECTION of student members of the college athletic board Wednesday at 10:30-12:30 a. m. and 1:30-3:30 p. m. Students are urged to join in the election. The candidates are C. T. Borg, N. J. Elliot, T. J. Hewitt, B. G. Lewis, J. R. Bender, C. E. Bell, A. J. Coats, E. F. Davis, and Cyrus Mason. Each man voting must vote for five men. Twenty-five cents is charged each voter.

The Passing of the Fudge.

For the last ten years the fudge has reigned supreme. When it first came in as a delightful novelty, we smacked our lips in greedy approval—and we are still smacking, but there is not the same voracious demand for these dainties as once there was. Every girl has made hundreds of batches, and knows their every variety—the grainy fudge, the sticky fudge, the creamy fudge—the time has come for the last fudge.

Young gentlemen look languid now and partake from a sense of duty; young ladies cry out for novelty. Can't somebody invent something sweeter and stickier and nuttier and cheaper and healthier and newer than anything any mortal has ever heard of before? It must be so constructed that unheard-of quantities can be consumed at any hour of the day or night without the slightest disturbance of the digestive apparatus; it must be so unobjectionable that football captains shall place it upon the team training table; it must be so seductive that the faculty shall partake thereof; it must be so cheap that even our sophomore-freshman tramp can afford it; it must be so constituted that it cannot grain, will refuse to burn, will melt in your mouth, but not on your fingers, and will absolutely refuse to be anything else but perfect. Here is a grand opportunity for someone to gain renown and the heartfelt gratitude of the college world.—Lawrentian.
