Editorial Remarks

The student who misses today's game will have a valid reason for reproaching himself for a long time to come. The interest that is centered about this game is something intense. The Indians are very strong and will make a hard struggle for victory. Nothing would set them so much at ease as a victory over Nebraska, and they will fight like demons. Come out and help the team to win, and bring with you a megaphone and a determination to use it without cessation throughout the entire play.

The report that negotiations are in progress for bringing the Iowa-Nebraska game to Omaha still lacks definite confirmation. However, if such an arrangement is possible, there are many students here who would be glad to journey to Omaha to see the two teams meet. The gate receipts would undoubtedly be greater than if the game was played at Iowa City, and both financial considerations and the interest of the students here would be subserved. But as yet nothing is definite, and it is useless to bring up contingencies for which there may be no foundation.

Complaints are forthcoming from a number of the faculty in regard to the custom of young ladies who are wont to wear their hats in the recitation room. A sprinkling of hats, especially in a crowded room, makes it difficult for those in the back seats to obtain a view of writing on the blackboard or of the maps and charts that are often displayed by the instructor. They are obliged to compose themselves into various sorts of angles in order that their line of vision may not be obstructed by the rows or clumps of headgear, and oftentimes no matter how hard they try they fail in the attempt. It would be a source of gratification to many of the faculty if these young ladies would take account of the inconvenience they give rise to and make use of the proper remedy.

The red men are here with their feathers and paint, prepared for a massacre and for a war dance about the scattered remains of the Nebraskans. This afternoon the air will be filled with their whoops and war cries, and the white men will be busy in resisting the dusky invaders. They will enter the game with the whirl and the rush which carries all before it, if not at first effectively checked. But if they meet resistance and are hurled back the impetus of their attack will gradually weaken until worn out by the violence of their own efforts they will be obliged to give ground instead of gaining it.

Such are the foes with whom Nebraska will contend this afternoon. If they can gain the advantage at the start they will have a chance to score, but if they are thwarted in their designs at first their chances will grow steadily less. Nebraska has met the Indians before and knows their style of play. Although our team is not in the best of condition as far as individual players are concerned they are eager to meet the onslaughts of the Indians and to drive them back in disordered rout. The game will be fierce and hotly contested and no one can in justice to himself afford to miss it.

Guns Assigned.

The quartermaster is now assigning guns to the cadets. Company A received theirs on Tuesday last, B on Wednesday and C last evening. Company D will receive theirs next Monday. Some difficulty has been experienced in securing enough guns but the department feels confident that all will be provided with them.

Uniforms will not be worn before October 28th, owing to a misunderstanding on the part of one of the tailors.

Department of Entomology.

For the first time a manual is being used in the laboratory. This new method works very satisfactorily.

There is a decrease in the registration in this department in the first year classes, and in increase in the advanced.

On account of the inclement weather Wednesday evening, only six or seven were present at the opening meeting of the Bird club.

Members only will attend the next regular meeting of the Bird club. The questions to be discussed will be along the line of migration of birds. The club meets every other week.

Mr. J. C. Crawford of West Point is making a special study of wild bees. He is now engaged in the study and classification of several different kinds which he brought from Costa Rica during the summer. Some of them have never been classified.

Mr. W. D. Pierce, of the department, is at present making a special study of burrowing bees. He has found ten colonies in the salt bottoms around Lincoln and has taken casts of their holes.
