Editorial Remarks

The Department of Animal Husbandry of the University of Nebraska, has drawn the attention of the entire country by its success at the recent International Stock Show at Chicago. Of the three animals entered all were winners, one of them "Challenger," securing the highest prize offered. The display of foodstuffs was also pronounced by a judge of former exhibits to be the best and most educational shown at the exhibition. This drew a prize of $75, which made a total of $615 in prize money for this institution.

We take pleasure in publishing the following communication, trusting that it may be of interest to our readers:

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 15, 1903.

Editor Nebraskan:

Dear Sir—Permit me to congratulate you upon the paper you are conducting this year. I consider it the best student paper ever published at the University of Nebraska. In the general make-up, news-service and all that makes a live paper, The Nebraskan now ranks high among college papers. Yours truly,

H. G. SHEDD.

The Missouri Independent, which is one of the brightest and best edited college weeklies in the country, is involved in financial straits which threaten to endanger its continuance in the future. The students and faculty have been lax in their support, and have not accorded it the measure of aid that it deserves. This is one of the greatest obstacles to college journalism. In many institutions the strenuous efforts of loyal and capable students engaged in editing the college paper must count for naught, because the students and faculty are not awake to the sense of their duty. This is a universal complaint among our exchanges, and one which certainly has a just foundation.

Our basket ball team has started the season in an encouraging manner, and given indications of being able to cope with the strongest teams on the schedule. Wesleyan was defeated by faster and more accurate playing, which was the result of several months' vigorous training. Almost since school opened a large squad has been practicing basket ball, and an unusual degree of interest manifested. The crowd in attendance was sufficient evidence that a greater interest has been awakened in basket ball than heretofore existing. If this interest is not suffered to relax we may in the future look to see the game firmly rooted here and competent teams ready to defend our colors against all opponents. The faculty game was responsible for a large part of the attendance, and although we disliked to see our own instructors defeated, we are glad the game was played. The faculty have already aroused much interest in athletics, and as long as they continue to figure personally, the cause will be bettered. Now that the season has started, unusual activity may be looked for, especially after the holidays, when the main part of the schedule, begins and the class teams get under way.

Miss Jennie Whitmore '06, was unable to attend classes the first of the week on account of illness.

Encouragement for 'Challenger.'

The following article taken from the Breeders Gazette, the leading stock organ in the country, is in connection with the winning of the first prize by "Challenger," our state farm product, at the recent International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago:

"Many colleges were represented by delegations of students, covering country from North Dakota to Texas, and from Ohio to California. Some groups numbered over 125. These lads swept down on the show in phalanxes, sounding their college yells like Comanches. Enthusiasm long bottled up was repeatedly uncorked in rhythmical chants, until the onlookers (or auditors) were prone to wonder whether they were at a stock show or a football game, and whether the placid-eyed animals undergoing judgment in the rings were bullocks or center-rushes or full-backs. But alas for the yell that was never yelled! The big delegation of husky lads (and blooming lassies) from the Gopher state, had shouted Clear Lake Jute through a succession of victories which landed him a contestant for the grand championship, but that final yell, that climax of punctuated accentuated sound, that was to leap forth in paralyzing volume when Jute was declared champion, died in their throats when the purple badge of championship honors was laid on the hornless head of the blue roan bullock from the rival University of Nebraska. One lone Nebraska lad sent up a whoop that did full credit to his small lungs, but Nebraska needed not the yell; it had the ribbon."

Just a Suggestion.

There is nothing that one can give as a Christmas present that is more appreciated than an artistic, life-like portrait.

Money spent in this way goes farther than in any other line. Think of this suggestion. See what we are producing and make an appointment for your sitting immediately.
