Agricultural School Notes.

The library at the farm is open now every evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock.

The holiday vacation of the school of agriculture will last from December 24th to January 4th.

Professor Votaw has been busy the last few days placing a new dynamo in the power house, which will be used for running the motor in the shop building.

Professor Smith gave a talk to the school Tuesday on the International live stock show, explaining the victories of "Challenger," and exhibiting the eight blue ribbons.

Work on the three new buildings is progressing rapidly. The dairy barn is nearly completed, and the shops and horticultural buildings, it is hoped, will be ready for use shortly after the holidays.

Dr. Gain, of the veterinary department, holds a clinic every Saturday morning, and performs operations on animals that are brought in from the surrounding country. Last Saturday the crooked ears of a colt were neatly trimmed.

The class of 1904 met last week and formed a class organization. J. W. Dawson of Lancaster, was elected president, and J. M. Brown of Dodge, secretary. This is the first class organization formed in the school, and is intended for the promotion of class spirit, for sociability and for general improvement. There are sixteen members of this class.

Joseph E. Wing, a well known writer on agricultural topics, addressed the school last Monday morning. Mr. Wing did not deal with technical matters, but gave an inspiring talk on "Work," showing from his own experiences the value of persistence. Mr. Wing has visited the school several times, and he is always given an enthusiastic reception.

The department of agriculture, as well as that of animal husbandry, won the blue ribbon at Chicago. The first prize of $75 was awarded the Nebraska exhibit of grasses and forage crops, combined with the feed exhibit. The latter were prepared by Professor Smith, and the collection of grasses and forage crops was made by Mr. E. G. Montgomery, of the department of agriculture, and was the result of very careful work.

The enrollment in the school has reached 102. This is more than double the registration in the long course last year at this time. Such a marked increase has inspired one of the students to make the following estimate: "If the attendance at the school of agriculture should keep up the ratio of increase shown in the last five years, there would be, at the end of the next ten years, 40,000 students in the school."

Not even the most sanguine, however, expect the ratio to be maintained.

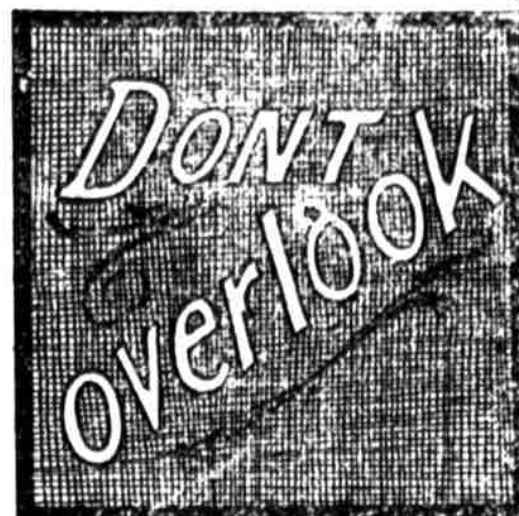

Engineering Notes

The Engineering Society met Wednesday evening in U. 107. After a short business meeting, Professor C. R. Richards gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the "Allis-Chalmers Company. The advertising department of the company furnished a number of lantern slides illustrative of their various productions and these added made the talk all the more interesting. The Allis-Chalmers company is perhaps the largest firm in the world manufacturing heavy machinery and the views included steam engines of very large units, hoisting, hydraulic and mining machinery.

Professor Richards also gave a brief review of the life of the late R. H. Thurston, dean of Sibley College, Cornell. Professor Richards' personal relations with Dr. Thurston enabled him to treat the subject in a very satisfactory manner.
