Editorial Remarks

Unless ordered discontinued The Daily Nebraskan will be sent the coming semester to all present subscribers.

We are confident that what we have said concerning the subject of the Junior Annual is the common sentiment of the University at large. The example drawn from past publications has been pointed out sufficiently but not exaggerated. The University looks with expectancy to those who will have the work in charge next year. They will have an opportunity to make an honorable record and earn the respect of their fellow students by producing a book worthy of the name. The field is large enough to support a book that will properly reflect the best that the University can boast in all its departments, and one that will be a vast improvement over any former one and compare favorably with those published by other institutions. Whatever is good and honorable in the student body we hope to see represented in the production of next year's book, and not methods that will not stand investigation. This is what we contend for, and we propose to use our best efforts in helping to bring about such a result.

Minor games have been most prominent on the basket ball program this week, but the meetings of our team with opponents of their calibre are not far distant. We must not forget that Wisconsin will soon be here with a mighty reputation to back her and a strong proposition to offer. Such a game as is promised ought to be an attraction of such a character as to make the accommodations of our armory all too inadequate to hold the crowd in attendance. This is the first strong aggregation that our team will meet, and it is certainly one of the strongest that it will have to face during the coming season. Therefore it should prove an attraction, indeed, and we hope it will receive the attention it deserves.

Professor McVey of the department of economics of the University of Minnesota has been misquoted by St. Paul papers which are catching the contagion spread by the organs that have faithfully misrepresented Chancellor Andrews to the best of their ability. Professor McVey will be remembered as one of the judges presiding at the Nebraska-Missouri debate last year. He is also made to suffer injustice through the lack of principle of papers who willfully misquote in order that they may have grounds for regaling the minds of the most morbid of their readers upon whom they can rely as never failing to be interested.

The cold weather has not been encouraging for an early beginning of track team work, and not until conditions are more favorable can much be done. Registration has met expectations, and the return of fine weather will see a good string of athletes working into form on the athletic field. Prospects are good, but improvement can be made in several places, and it is hoped that all deficiencies can be supplied from the new material.

The World-Herald reporter who so ingeniously garbled an interview with Chancellor Andrews, was a caller at the executive office yesterday, seeking for another trial. His name is Mr. Newbranch, and he is a graduate of this University.

Academy Notes.

The next issue of the Lincoln Academy News will appear next week. Thanks to the energetic work of Miss Lathrop, an unusually large amount of excellent student matter is coming in. Now, if the business managers are equally successful the paper will make its appearance as a three column number. The executive page will contain an article by Dr. R. E. Mpritz on two benefits which the study of mathematics especially yield. One-half of the issue of five hundred copies goes to regular subscribers and the other half is sent to interested friends of the Academy.

The neat credit cards for last semester's work are being distributed and as usual bring both joy and sorrow. Happily there is another semester begun in which poor records may be made better, better best. As a whole examinations and registration passed off smoothly and the new classes are well under way. The registration from the University was never so small. Were it not that the Academy is growing in the number of students taking full work the outlook would be discouraging. The gain more than offsets the loss, fortunately.

The Social Hour club meets at four o'clock next Friday afternoon at Mrs. Hodgman's home, 700 North 16th St. A program committee consisting of the Misses Keo Currie, Edna Baker and Hazel Cameron will see that entertainment is offered and another committee will serve light refreshments. This is a splendid opportunity for the young women who have just entered the Academy to get acquainted with the older members. A most cordial invitation is extended to University women who are carrying one or more subjects only in the Academy. Now that the University weekly teas are no longer existent, these social hour meetings afford the only opportunity for social acquaintance and relaxation.

In accordance with the decision to meet the city Y. M. C. A. debaters the Academy club has made the wise decision to abide by the selection of a jury of impartial University men. These men thus chosen will begin a thorough study of the question and try to crucify these Christians of the Halter block. One naturally dislikes to see the number of such good people diminished, but our fellows feel a call to smite them hip and thigh.

Messrs. Jacob C. Traver, of Norden, Neb., and Arch Hamer, of Nashville, Tenn., are the latest additions to the list of regular Academy students. All hope that these new students will soon feel at home in their new school.

The Academy stationery prepared by the Co-Op is meeting with hearty approval. No one now has any excuse for not writing the old folks at home.
