In the matter of special examinations it was ordered that the following rules will be in force from and after September 1, 1904:

1. No student has a right to demand a private examination. Such examinations are granted simply as favors at the option of instructors.

2. No member of a class or section may, for any reason or under any pretext whatever, be privately examined at a time earlier than that at which the regular examination of the class or section is scheduled. Any individual examination permitted must be held later.

3. To be examined at a time later than that set for his class or section, whatever the reason, a student must pay a special examination fee of one dollar per course, first obtains his instructor's consent thereto, and then pays the secretary the proper fee, taking a receipt. This receipt, being shown the instructor, authorizes him to proceed with the examination.

4. All special examination fees will, like matriculation fees, be turned into the library fund.
