Cases Ready for Shipment.

The handsome finished cases which contain some choice Indian relics consisting of peace-pipes, mocasins, and other primitive instruments, together with some excellent views of early Nebraska life, are lined up at the side entrance of the Historical society rooms. These cases are colored with crystal white paint and neatly varnished, so that they add a brilliant luster to the shining collections. The front side of the cases will consist of a heavy plate glass, which adds very much to their beauty and will serve as a shield for protection. The entire collection consists of about thirty-five cases of artistically arranged material and is a highly commendable piece of work, well worth the time for anyone to view it carefully.

ADDRESS AT CHAPEL.

Mrs. W. A. Green Gives Pleasing Talk on French Dramatist.

Mrs. W. H. Greene talked on the life and literary productions of one of the greatest of modern dramatists during chapel period yesterday morning. M. Rostand, the subject of her discussion is a Frenchman, a native of Marseilles, and a descendent of aristocratic ancestors. He is yet very young and his productions have gained great popularity—some of them being translated into fifteen different languages. The most of his life has been spent in close study and his mind has been entirely absorbed with stage craft, hunting out the wonderful effects that reveal character. He does not depend so much on accident or incident, but breathes into his works so much of the soul. The life of the man was well brought out in a pleasing manner by Mrs. Greene, and those who were present are enabled to appreciate more fully the efforts of this literary artist.
