WILL MEET TODAY

Board Will Locate Administration And Physics Buildings.

The fate of the athletic field will be decided today. The building committee of the Board of Regents is now in session, trying to devise some means for solving the question of the location of the new physics building. It is probable that this will be upon the athletic field, but the plans may be so changed as to permit enough space being reserved to still allow athletics to hold sway at the University of Nebraska.

Superintendent of Construction Chovins stated this much to a Nebraskan reporter, in an interview yesterday afternoon. He continued: "The plans may be altered by cutting off ten feet from the north wing of the building instead of making the proposed addition. This, it is thought, would leave sufficient space for the football field. The Regents are just as anxious as

The plans for the new Administration building are now at the office of the superintendent of construction, and while they will be subject to several minor changes, practically represent the building as it will be constructed.

The structure will be two stories in height, with a basement. From the ground to the first floor line it will be built of cut stone. Sand brick will be used from that point to the caps of the second story, when stone will again be employed. The general plan of construction will be modeled according to the Renaissance style. Three entrances, on the east, west and south, will be furnished, but the former two will open on the main hall. This will be floored with marble and mosaics. The stairways leading to the second floor will also be of marble. A handsome driveway for carriages will be situated at the south front of the new building.

The basement will be rather shallow, being only five feet below the ground. It will contain vaults, store and janitors' rooms. The vaults will extend to the second floor. All records will be stored in the basement vaults, while papers and books in immediate use will be deposited in the other floors. The first floor will contain the prin-

SOPHOMORES WIN

Sophomore Girls Win In An Exciting Game.

Something must be wrong with about two thousand University students, and professors, because less than three hundred people attended a basket ball tournament last night that should and heretofore always has, packed the Armory to the roof. There was a premium on front seats in expectation that the girls would be reckless, as last year, when many a youth was roundly roasted on the way home by his own girl for being too willing to let the players fall into his lap. But the players must have been warned by Mrs. Clapp, who has become very austere since she deserted the bonds of single blessedness and excepting in the most exciting moments of the game the lovelorn swains in the front row were compelled to view the beauties from afar.

Miss Everett to help out, which she did so well that when the last whistle blew the score was 17 to 6 against the latest additions to the University.

After a short rest the Sophomores and Seniors appeared to play the final game for the championship. The game was fiercely contested from the first whistle, and the first half was nearly over before Miss Everett threw a brilliant goal from field. Each side made another goal before the half ended, when the score was 4 to 2 in favor of the Sophomores.

The second half opened with a goal in the first minute of play for the Sophs, which seemed to inspire them, and discouraged the Seniors, for before they could score the lower class had piled up eight more points to their credit. The final score was 16 to 6 in favor of the Sophs.

The following are the teams:

SENIOR.

Centers, Cora Scott and Harriet Mitchell; guards, Nella Schlesinger and Alice Unthank; forwards, Emma Shimbur (captain), Beulah Livesay; substitute, Daisy Aitken.

Centers, Alice Towne and Adele Koch; guards, Ruth Woodsmall and Angie Roosa; forwards, Minnie Jansa

anyone else to retain the field, on the campus, and if this is possible it will be done."

He stated further that the building would soon commence construction, and would probably interfere somewhat with spring athletics this year. He was of the opinion, however, that the building would not keep athletics from the campus permanently.

Dr. Condra spoke along the same line in chapel yesterday morning. He said: "I have assurance from one high in authority that the matter in which you are now deeply interested has been thoroughly and well considered by the chancellor and the members of the Board of Regents and that no student in the school has lost more sleep and spent more time than the Board of Regents. Everyone should refrain from making radical statements and further realize that those in authority will dispose of the question in a way that will be for the best interests of the school as a whole. I hope that nothing has been said or will be said that will leave a false impression regarding this matter in anyone's mind."

cipal offices—those of the chancellor, secretary, registrar, etc. A large room will be provided for the deans and the temporary senate. The second floor will be given up to the offices of the superintendent of construction, drafting and stenographic offices. No class or recitation rooms will be located in the entire structure. The total estimated cost will be about $35,000.

This building will be commenced as soon as the plans are definitely settled and the contract awarded. The contract for the new State Farm building will be advertised next week.

There was a distressing lack of enthusiasm, and not until the second half of the Senior-Junior game did a small portion of the audience discover that there is no rule against cheering at basket ball games, or that yells are not confined to class meetings.

The first game was between the Seniors and the Juniors, who have held the Championship for the last two years. In the first half they promised to cinch the pennant for another term, and walked over '04 to the tune of 7 to 3. But in the second half they missed their three former stars, Misses Pearl Archibald, Alice Towne and Ruth Bryan, and the Seniors showed such superior team work that when the game ended the score stood 11 to 10 in their favor.

The Freshmen had a green team, but went at the game with such a will that they gave the Sophs a hard rub in the first half, although they were unable to score. In the second half the girls of '07 seemed to have caught a large part of the spirit of their most able captain, Miss Willa Adams, and threw several goals without giving the Sophs a look-in, and forced them to call on
