Editorial Remarks

Material is being packed for exhibition at the World's Fair, and our university will be represented in several lines. The means that have been placed in the hands of those who have been charged with this work are being made the most of. The appropriations made for the purpose were quite limited, but they are as liberal as the circumstances would permit. We hope to be fairly well represented, and we can rest assured that our interests will be carefully attended to and whatever is done will be done well.

In the general trend of affairs the Nebraskan is sometimes obliged to remind its readers of matters relating to its existence. We have not aimed to torture our subscribers with constant reminders to come or send in and settle accounts, but we would like to remind them how matters stand, in as agreeable a manner as possible. It is a difficult matter to reach all against whom we have accounts in a manner that will attract their careful attention. Hence we now request that our subscribers who have not settled yet should yet should do so at their earliest possible convenience. The college paper cannot subsist on wind, although the elements may sometimes find their way into our columns. Another thing that we would like to remind those to whom it applies, is that if any are receiving the Nebraskan through some mistake when they have not ordered it, to remind us at once instead of letting the matter drag on to a disagreeable outcome.

If you never did a good thing in your life before, come out to the mass meet- ing today. Come out and get into the spirit of the proceedings, if only for the physical benefit alone. Our basket-ball team is going up against a hard proposition in Wisconsin and we want to see it win. Keep this fact in mind and go to chapel this morning with the intention of yelling, to see if you have not forgotten how, if for no other reason. But there will be plenty going on to rouse up the most sedate or phlegmatic spirits. There will be speakers who hope to be able to instruct the crowd properly in the advisability of attending this, the great game of the season. Wisconsin is tearing up the dust with her opponents, but there is no great advantage on her side that would absolutely prevent our speedy team from beating her. We have got a good chance, and that is worth thinking about. It is hoped that in the mass meeting today our students will be drawn to a closer appreciation in basket-ball and that their interest will be sufficiently aroused to impel them to support the game better. But in particular we must keep our attention on this Wisconsin until the Badgers' pelts have been extracted or our own exacted instead. Come out this morning and again tomorrow night. Let one be the cause and the other the effect if you have not yet made up your minds.

Our neighboring institutions have been interested in the difficulties attendant upon the location of the new physics building and have discussed the situation quite freely. Some have prematurely concluded that athletics were bound to go here. But now that everything has been settled, we are glad to inform them that all our schedules will be carried out as originally planned.

A political cartoon is one of the most deceptive means that can be employed against any cause or individual. Exaggeration is the foundation and the moving principle in this kind of an attack on personalities, and its evident purpose is to present one central idea forcibly at the expense of actual facts and trueness to life. If a cartoon showing some political notion is worked out cleverly it sometimes produces a laugh, whether it carries conviction with it or not. But a cartoon illustrating a brutal and untrue accusation such as the World-Herald makes use of in the chief preconceived development of the Temple building controversy, disgusts rather than amuses. If it was well done and had a good idea to illustrate it might serve to better effect, but its own inadequacy to fulfill even expected requirements condemns it, and monotonous repetition does not help it either.

Dr. Wharton at Chapel.

Dr. Wharton of the St. Paul M. E. church of this city talked to a large gathering of students yesterday morning on the subject "Authority of Religion." He said in part: "Religion is related to all forms of human society and every manner of human activity. Irreligious sciences or any of these college studies are incomplete. They have not the finish, the touch, that makes perfect. Authority is internal and not external, it is within and not without. It may well be compared to a tree which grows and will spring up naturally under the proper influence of the soil. You can not keep it from growing if the conditions are right, but on the other hand, if they are wrong, it will die and nothing under heaven can stop it. Truth will grow wherever the conditions are favorable and the force of its growth will be felt."

Dr. Wharton spoke of the relation of church to religion; that it declared what the Bible is and what it means thus helping to nourish religion. He warned the people about nourishing the tree of truth that it might grow and its influence be felt.

The style of the address was in his usual easy, energetic style which demonstrates so much of the personal characteristics of the man. His impressive appeal to young folks has such stimulating effects that we all like to hear him.

Medic Commencement Orator.

Yesterday it was announced that the orator for the commencement of the medical college had been chosen. Prof. Robert Orton Moody of the Anatomical Laboratory of the University of California, will deliver the address upon this occasion. The commencement exercises will be held May 26th in Omaha.
