Editorial Remarks

The following editorial comment on the Chicago-Nebraska game last Saturday appeared in Monday's Chicago Maroon. Nebraskans will appreciate the hospitable attitude of the Chicagoans as evinced in this editorial and in the treatment of our team during its stay at their institution. Such an expression of appreciation as this should do much toward condoning for the defeat of our team experienced in its contest with the Maroons:

"Nebraska has a good baseball team. The game of Saturday between the Cornhuskers and Maroons was by far the most interesting of the season to date. The men from beyond the 'muddy waters' play a fast game, all the time, and they accept the rulings of the umpire and the fortunes of war like gentlemen. Chicago students will hope to see Nebraska on Marshall Field again next year."

It is a duty of all who have the means and the leisure to attend the Glee club concert at the Oliver tomorrow night. A good Glee club is a credit to any institution, and we have reason for feeling proud of ours. We have a superior organization now, and if it is to retain or increase its present efficiency it must be properly supported by those whose interests it seeks to serve. The men have worked hard and the director has spent much of his time and effort in training the club, and these facts should not be lost sight of. The men are lending their services to a worthy purpose, and their labors should receive substantial recognition by a large turnout at the concert tomorrow night.

SERIOUS TROUBLE

A Safety Pin Gets the Senior Annual into Hot Water.

Though a small thing in itself, a humble safety-pin can sometimes cause a great deal of trouble. At least one has succeeded in making its presence felt through the enterprise of one of the Senior Annual josh editors. In consequence of a reference made to a situation wherein a safety-pin figured in a sufficiently conspicuous manner to attract attention, the Kappa Kappa Gammas have declared that the Senior Annual is a vulgar publication.

While this is a rather hard estimate of the virtues of such an estimable book as the Senior Annual, all respect is paid to the opinion of the Kappa Gammas, and if anything offensive to them is contained in the book, it is indeed regretted. In our own opinion, a safety-pin has its place in this great world of ours, but it is susceptible to shiftings and changes and has even caused an idea to assail the intellectuality of one of the Senior Annual editors.

But there seems to be no grounds for condemning the book as vulgar on account of this lonely safety-pin. We have found some very good things in it, that bear no traces of depravity.

Honestly speaking now, does not a safety pin have a useful function in the world and are we not doing it an injustice in condemning an article in which it was mentioned? How can we expect more accommodations if we can not make use of those which we have?

But seriously speaking, the book seems quite conservatively edited. A member of the faculty was enthusiastic in commenting upon the book, declaring in his opinion that there was nothing offensive in the jokes, and that many sharp points were brought out. Commandant Chase stated the book is a credit to the Senior class, which view we are inclined to share. Two hundred books were sold yesterday, which is considered a good first day's sale.

ASSISTANTS WANTED

Agricultural Station Wants Three Laboratory Assistants.

A request has been received from the New York agricultural station for three assistants in laboratory work. The following communication gives all of the particulars.

E. B. Andrews, Chancellor of University, Industrial College of the University of Nebraska:

Dear Sir—By authority of the board of control of this station, we are prepared to admit to our laboratories between now and July 1st, three student assistants; one each in the departments of botany (plant pathology, bacteriology and entomology). In order to be eligible to these positions, candidates must be graduates of a four years' course in science, preferably at a land grant college where the sciences are taught with especial reference to their bearing upon the art of agriculture. It is essential, moreover, that such candidates shall have pursued studies specially fitting them to undertake work in one of these departments and that they shall have shown such proficiency and enthusiasm in special directions as will warrant their choosing one of these lines of study and investigation for a life work.

As their main work, it is proposed, under the guidance of the heads of the departments, to associate these assistants with one or more subjects of investigation, with the understanding that they shall devote a minor portion of each day to the care of the laboratories, preparation of materials and other routine duties. They must be prepared to enter immediately under proper direction, upon a study of one or more problems without spending a considerable portion of time in acquiring the necessary preparatory knowledge and skill.—For instance, the student assistant in bacteriology should be familiar in a practical way with the technics of making cultures.

Full credit will be given in our publications for the work accomplished.

This station is engaged in several important lines of investigation and it is believed that the observation and experience gained by such close association with this work will constitute a valuable training for those who are ambitious to connect themselves with experiment stations as investigators.

The selection of these assistants will be based upon their records as students and upon such knowledge of their personality and training as may be gained in various ways. It is expected that they will remain at the station not less than one year. Board, room, laundry expense and laboratory material will be furnished free of charge, no other compensation being offered.

Will you kindly call the attention of former graduates and of members of your Senior class who have special training in the directions named, to these opportunities and request them, if they desire to seek the positions offered, to communicate with the undersigned at an early date? Your truly,

W. H. JORDAN,
Director.
