The Bohemian club of the University had a meeting last Saturday evening. They will meet again on Next Saturday evening and discuss the eastern question in their own language.

Ralph J. Buck, '02, writes from Red Oak, Ia., where he is employed in the city schools, that he has been elected for the coming year at an increase in salary. He will visit at the University during commencement this year.

Hon. E. L. King, of Osceola, Neb., a former student of Professor Bessey's called on the professor in his botanical office a few days ago. Mr. King was a student of botany with the professor in one of the earliest classes in this subject that he taught when a young instructor in Ames College, in Iowa.

Last Saturday Professor Bessey received from a correspondent in France a little packet containing cuttings of four different species of cottonwoods, all of which are additions to those which are now planted any place on the farm. They will be rooted in the greenhouse and then planted on the forestry plantations of the University Farm. One of the species is very nearly the same as the common cottonwood of the west, growing in similar places in Europe, but differing from our species in its seed pods. It will be interesting to watch of growth of these foreign species.
