Mr. Anderson, of Albion, Neb., a graduate of the University Law department, was on the campus yesterday.

Rev. J. M. Bates, a well known botanist of Red Cloud, Neb., was in the city during the week, looking up various plants in the University herbarium. He has contributed a large number of plants to the herbarium, and the professors in the department are always glad to see him, for he never comes without bringing some new thing.

G. F. Miles, '03, now of the pathological-botanical division of the United States department of agriculture, spent a little time on Tuesday with his botanical friends on the campus. He conferred with Dr. Bessey in regard to the work he is doing for his master's degree. He is investigating some of the obscure diseases of cultivated plants in the south, and is located at the present time in Texas. He is enthusiastic over his work, and feels that it is a great thing to be in the service of the government.
