Editorial Remarks

In spite of the wintry change in weather, and the mud, the football squad holds up remarkably well in point of numbers. Nearly as many men report for practice now as did the first of the season, and new men are constantly appearing. But the men in the hard grinding practice and the regular routine and hard knocks deserve some commendation, and the best returns for this self-sacrifice can be had from the rooters. Considering the short time it takes to stop at practice, give a few lusty enthusiastic yells, and then leave for a class, or laboratory, more of these same cheers should be given the faithful men who give a great deal of their time and strength that the men in the bleachers itself was at stake and that the hour was ripe for decision. He declared his position, debate followed debate, the nation was aroused and Lincoln eventually became the instrument by means of which the shackles of despair were stricken from 4,000,000 slaves.

Too bad it must be so, but next year the game might be played at Nebraska.

"There are great questions at issue today which demand the attention of equally consecrated leaders. The struggle between capital and labor is one which is most grave, threatening the stability of the commercial world and even menacing the very existence of many people in the congested centers of population. To solve this problem is one of the crying needs of the times and the call is for a leader who shall be equal to the emergency and who, catching inspiration from above, shall be able to lead the contending factions into permanent paths of peace.

"The trust question is another disturbing element in the body politic. The rights of many are being ruthlessly trampled upon by the few, and corporate greed is assuming to itself privileges and prerogatives wholly at variance with the teachings of the golden rule. The need here is for a consecrated leader capable of rising above personal interests and prejudices, who shall be able to work out a solution on a high plane of ethics and demonstrate its feasibility to the American people. Here is an opportunity for a display of the most exalted statesmanship and the winning of imperishable renown.

"The race problem is another 'riddle of the Sphinx' which presses for solution. Fortunately we are so situated that the full force of this question does not appeal to us as it does to some other sections of the country, but that it is a mighty problem we are all agreed. There are those who see in the future the signs of an impending conflict between the races, one which will deluge the country with blood and result in practical extermination. Such a drastic view ignores the fact that God reigns and that 'His arm is not shortened.' There is no doubt in my mind but that the perplexing question will ultimately reach a peaceful solution and that through divine influence the needed leaders will be developed who will be able to successfully grapple with all phases of the subject."

may have something worth while to root for. Here at Nebraska we don't root enough. Consider what a football game now-a-days would be without the rooter and his megaphone. The game with Grand Island will recall such an instance. Only one cheer was heard during the whole game, and that was at the end. At other schools rooting clubs are organized, with membership dues. Rooting caps and badges are adopted, and cheering is there in fine art. We can root all right, and that is why the Nebraskan kicks because we don't do it. Come out to practice, and root. If you can't stay long one yell with the proper spirit will help some, and another will help some more. Come out and root.

LETTER FROM LEWIS. Nebraska Man Writes to Nebraskan from Wisconsin. The Nebraskan has received the following letter from Burdette G. Lewis, '63, who is now at the University of Wisconsin: "Dear Nebraskan: "The daily is even better than ever this year. It is eagerly sought in each day's mail. The excellent write of the home coming celebration given the team on its return from Colorado brought a thrill of pride to my heart. The write up of that event in the Minneapolis Journal has caused much comment here. Though Wisconsin has the spirit to celebrate her defeats as ardently as her victories, the report of "Bummie" Booth and his warriors in tears has caused a deep respect for Nebraska to spring up here. "Wisconsin men have a strong regard for the prowess of the Nebraskans. It was Phil King who said the Nebraska game was the hardest game His championship team played in 1901. One of the members of the board told me the other day that they refused to play Nebraska any more because it is too hard a proposition. "All eyes are on Nebraska this year. Every Wisconsin man is hoping that Nebraska will give Minnesota such a grubbing that either victory will perch on her banner or that Minnesota will lack spirit when Wisconsin meets her later. "Wisconsin is getting into shape to play Michigan October 29 on home ground. If the Ohio state—Michigan game of last Saturday is any criterion, Michigan will strike a surprise that will be worse than six to six last year with Minnesota. "Student interest in the team and attendance at practice revolutionized the team here in less than a week. Don't be afraid to watch the practice and cheer for the team." B. G. LEWIS, "University of Wisconsin."

The Nebraska Experiment station has just issued a bulletin covering three experiments in cattle feeding. One experiment shows the relative economy of wintering calves on hay alone, hay with a light grain ration, and hay with a heavier grain ration. Another experiment, made with five lots of yearling steers, shows the relative cost of producing gains on five common Nebraska rations. The third experiment was made with two-year old steers on grass pasture to determine whether or not oil-meal added to corn would lessen the cost of gains. The bulletin may be obtained free of cost by residents of Nebraska upon writing to the Nebraska Experiment Station, Lincoln, Nebr., for bulletin No. 85.
