Editorial Remarks

The stealing mania has again struck the university. Last week two overcoats and $10 were stolen from students. It seems more than probable that these thefts were committed by members of the student body, for the students are the only ones usually having access to the various places where such things as overcoats are kept. If the student honor cannot be effectually appealed to, another object lesson might well be made by the faculty. A strict vigilance should be maintained and the first thief detected should be shown up as a warning to his kind.

The Chorus will rehearse the Messiah on Thursday at 5 p. m., and with the orchestra on Saturday at 7 p. m. There will be no Friday rehearsal. Every one who intends to sing this work is urged to attend these rehearsals. The performance will take place next Wednesday at 11 a. m.

PEDAGOGICAL CLUB MEETS

W. A. Sellic of the City School Board Addresses Them.

The Pedagogical club met last night. After a short social period Professor Luckey called attention to the important features of the teachers' certificate which should interest applicants for the certificates. He then introduced Mr. W. A. Sellic of the city school board who read a paper which gave many useful hints as to personal qualities and school conditions and relations which should help teachers in dealing with school boards and other officials and prosecuting the many-sided work of the school. General conditions were made plain by well chosen and interesting statistics. The fact that the average attendance in Nebraska is very low, shows that teachers have something to do, and yet Nebraska has a lower percentage of illiteracy than any other state. This is but a touch many vital points.

In speaking of the qualities which stand one in good stead in dealing with school boards, he made it evident that scholarship and professional training must be supplemented by certain personal qualities; that personality, whether from the point of view of dress or that of general carriage count largely in the case. He spoke also of the teachers' code, which should be carefully observed during the teacher's servitude, and of the general aim which should guide in directing pupils to the winning of high character.

He closed with some famous lines from Longfellow's "Morituri Salutamus." It was a practical talk by a practical man, and it is hoped we can print it in full at some future time.

WILL PLAY MINNESOTA

Basketball Men Hope to Meet Gophers.

Another game of basketball will be played with the University of Minnesota when our team journeys north. A new stunt will be tried, that of playing two games on two successive days. We will meet the Gophers on Friday afternoon, January 20, and Saturday morning, January 21. Manager Beers is in correspondence with a number of northern teams, but the schedule of games to be played on the trip north is not settled as yet.

A return game of basketball is to be played with Wesleyan on our floor the last of this week or the first of next. We defeated the Methodists by the narrow margin of 1 point. In writing up the game our University Place neighbors made the statement that we used questionable means, and succeeded in winning out. Perhaps our work was questionable to inexperienced Wesleyan, and the difference in scores the next time we meet will make the next game still more questionable.

MEDALS AWARDED

Nebraska Gets Her Share at St. Louis.

Official information has been received at the university to the effect that medals have been awarded on various university exhibits at the Louisiana Purchase exposition as follows:
Gold medals: Collective exhibit of 150 jars of threshed grains and seeds. Reed's Yellow Dent Corn. Collective Educational exhibit.
Silver medals: Collective exhibit of photographs illustrating mineral resources.

State Museum—Collective exhibit of soils, minerals and building materials. A gold medal was also awarded to Professor E. H. Barbour for collection of cannas.

Miss Edith L. Webster also received a gold medal for design and installation of exhibits.

"KENSINGTON" CLOTHES—They Fit.

Prideful Suits and Overcoats

Very few suits actually wear out. It is generally the sagging of the front or ill-fitting collar of the coat that renders the suit useless to the well dressed man. That's why so many young men complain of the fit of their clothes and come to us for our "Kensingtons"—for "Kensington" coats never fail to fit close at the collar and the fronts and lapels stay like new to the last.

If you are thinking of dressing up for Christmas, why not do it with clothes you'll feel proud of? True they cost a trifle more than some kinds, but the BEST always does.
