Engineering Notes.

A. A. Miller, E. E., '98, of the Seattle office of the Westinghouse Electric Co., was here for a few days visit.

H. L. Woodford, '07, has left school to accept a position on the maintenance of way on the Burlington railroad.

J. A. Green is now managing the Culbertson irrigation ditch construction. The ditch when finished will connect 35 miles of main canal and many miles of tributary ditches.

G. W. Bates is now assistant secretary of the State Board of Irrigation, equivalent to Assistant State Engineer in other states. Mr. Green and Mr. Bates were senior civil engineers.

G. H. Ellsworth, formerly superintendent of Garden and Buildings, an engineering student in the late eighties was here for a few days. Mr. Ellsworth was in the employ of the University for about nine years.

Prof. O. V. P. Stout will go to Lexington for a short time to commence the work of irrigation and drainage investigation. The State Legislature has appropriated $500 for this purpose, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture has given a like amount.

Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co., Pittsburg, Pa., representative, will give a moving picture exhibition of the interior of their shops. This demonstration will be given by Mr. Chas. E. Downton, foreman of apprentices, on March 21st. Mr. Downton was a class mate of Prof. Richards.

In connection with the positions held by Mr. J. A. Green and G. W. Bates, they are an example of what takes place among the best material of the Engineering courses. Many of the undergraduates leave school to accept positions or take a position through the summer and find them so remunerative that they fail to come back to complete their Junior and Senior work. This demand for trained men with ability accounts partly for the large number of registrations and fewer graduates that statistics would otherwise show.
