UNGROUND CONFIDENCE.

Tomorrow Nebraska meets Ames for the first time in the memory of the present college generation, and most of the students seem to be confident of an easy victory for the Scarlet and Cream. This belief is without any grounds whatsoever, and even if the best team Nebraska has had this year could be put in against the Iowans, victory could be won only by hard and steady work on the part of Nebraska. With the men in the condition they are now in, there is no certainty that we will even beat Ames, much less that we will run up a big score. Ames has one of the best teams outside of the Conference, and will probably beat Iowa University in the contest for the championship of the state. Ames and Iowa have always been neck and neck in the race for the pennant, and while Iowa has generally won. It has only been by a small margin. After the game with Iowa last year, students will realize what the game Saturday is going to be like, providing they recognize the fact that our opponent is as strong as Iowa.

What is going to make our chances for victory all the slimmer is the fact that the team is by no means in good condition. Everybody is confident that if Booth could send his best men into the line-up tomorrow, victory would be ours to the tune of about twenty to nothing. He can not do this, however. Several of the men are out of the game for the season on account of injuries, others are over-trained and have gone stale; still others have been dropped from the first team on account of the Freshman rule, which we shall have to observe against all our future opponents. There are just enough men in good condition to make one fairly strong team, and these are the men who must meet Ames tomorrow. We feel that we can assure the coaches on behalf of the students that we would rather play a tie game tomorrow or even suffer defeat than to jeopardize our chances of beating Colorado by sending men into the game who are in no condition. A defeat at the hands of Ames is bad enough, but rather than to fail to whip Colorado on our own grounds.

With a badly crippled first team, or even with almost a second team, we must meet the strongest team in Iowa tomorrow, and assure victory every student should come armed with a big megaphone and cheer the men up every few seconds. The rooting so far this year has hardly been up to standard, and as Ames is bringing along two hundred voices, our men will have to do better than they have done this year. Another reason why rooting tomorrow should be as good as we can do is because the great game of the year on the home grounds, the Colorado game, comes the following Saturday, and our crippled team can never hope to win unless they receive abundant support from the bleachers.

The Classical Journal.

The Classical Association of the Middle West and South, through its executive committee, of which Prof. Barber is a member, has made arrangements for the publication of a journal of the association, to be called the Classical Journal. There will be eight numbers each year, and each number will contain the following departments:

Editorials discussing different subjects of interest; one or two articles of some length. Notes and discussions, consisting of short articles and critiques. Reports of meetings, new methods of teaching, etc., of special interest to teachers; book reviews, taking up all new classical text-books.

Every member of the Association is entitled to a year's subscription to the Classical Journal and to Classical Philology, a quarterly published in Chicago, the subscription price of which is $3.00. The annual dues of the Association are $2.00. It is desired that all dues be sent in before the end of the present month to B. L. D'Ooge, treasurer, Ypsilanti, Mich.

Lecture on Fish.

Prof. Reighard of the University of Michigan and one of the most famous fish experts in the country will give an illustrated lecture in Memorial Hall Tuesday evening, November 21. He will explain the newly discovered nesting habits of fish, which he has shown to be fully as complicated and interesting as those of birds. He has a large number of colored lantern slides illustrating these points and is regarded as one of the best speakers among college scientific men.

Academy Notes.

The Academy girls feel that they are most fortunate in securing Miss Ina Gittings as their basket-ball coach and showed their interest by the large number, who appeared at practice last evening.

The chapel on Monday morning is to be devoted to a rally in the interest of the Debating Club, which is to be reorganized next week. Professor Fogg will be present and will speak and Mr. Frank Peterson, who will coach the members will preside.

Three of the young men of the Academy have been out of school for a week on account of sickness. Mr. Robert Beckstrom has been taken to the sanitarium for treatment until he is able to be taken home.

The Academy News appeared on Wednesday morning and is the first number under the management of the new editorial staff.

The girls have formed a Bible study class under the guidance of the University Y. W. C. A. and are hoping to meet once a week.

Juniors

wanting '07 class hats see L. A. White or some member of class Hat Committee, giving name and size. Juniors should respond at once.

"Kensington" Clothing

Faultless in Fit and Style

Clothes that keep their shape are the kind sought after today. A few men still patronize the tailor, paying a half more, believing they get better tailoring. Had the present system of all hand work now employed in the making of our "Kensington" garments been used years ago, there would now be no demand for custom made.

As these "Kensington" garments become known, greater numbers of "tailor made men" wear them.

Suits in the most stylish models and very finest fabrics up to $35.00 Overcoats beyond criticism, up to $35.00 The styles cannot be questioned.

Rich patterns in striped worsted Trousers, $4.00 to $8.00
