NEBRASKA WINS

VARSIITY RUNS UP GOOD SCORE
ON THE MOUNTAINEERS.

Benedict the Star of Game—Visitors
Could Not Withstand Our Fierce Line Plunges.

Before one of the largest mid-season crowds ever seen at a Nebraska game, the varsity defeated Colorado by a score of 18-0. The game was a splendid exhibition of football, being free from any unnecessary roughness and mugging. The three touchdowns came hard, and it was only after fierce line plunges that the ball was pushed back of the goal posts. The first touchdown came near the end of the first half, with the others in the second. The general opinion was that the Colorado-Nebraska game was the most spectacular football contest seen on Nebraska field since the Illinois game of last Thanksgiving.

Before the game had advanced far it was seen that Nebraska would be the victor, although the score would be low. The Cornhuskers could stop the fierce line plunges of the westerners in a way that indicated the relative strength of the two teams. Colorado was unable to gain around our ends to any great extent, a few short gains being made around the right end. But in Christensen Colorado has an end that is speedy, and a sure tackler. This man was responsible for Nebraska's failure to make good, substantial gains on end runs, for he downed our men several times for a loss. The Cornhuskers hit the Colorado line with a fierceness that was weakening and the holes that our linemen opened up sometimes were wonderful, when we consider the way Kansas and Utah have fared in this respect this year.

Nebraska supporters were somewhat surprised on last Saturday to notice the unusual amount of fumbling on the passes between Borg and Benedict. There were more fumbles between these men on Saturday than in the Nebraska-Ames game of the preceding week on the wet field. But all this was due to an injury which Borg received on the first down, when Caley of Colorado fell on his head with his knees. In this way he was confused as to height and distance of his passes during the first half, but all this passed away in the second half.

The punting of Caley and Benedict in the game was of a high order, both men booting the ball about the same distance. The wind hindered the punting of the man who was defending the north goal, but during the latter part of the game the wind had so subsided that little difference was seen. On an average the punting of Benedict averaged about five yards more than that of the western punter, although Caley made some of the longest kicks ever seen on the field, for instance, the last kickoff, when the ball went over the north fence.

The rooting of the Colorado visitors was of a high order, and they introduced some stunts in rooting and singing college songs that created considerable favorable comment from the spectators. But the Nebraska rooters had the greatest volume in their yells and their work the first half was as good as any ever done by Nebraska rooters. But the one thing Nebraska lacks is a few new yells and songs.

The work of Chalmers and Rothgeb as officials in last Saturday's game was the best ever seen on the local field. At no time in the game did either team think they were receiving "dirt" at the hands of these men. Rothgeb was well remembered by the Lincoln people as the bright particular star of the Illinois team in last Thanksgiving's game.

First Half.

Borg won the toss, and chose the south goal to defend. When both teams had taken their respective places at 2:47 o'clock, Caley sent the ball into Benedict's hands, who returned it ten yards before being downed. Nebraska now by hard line plunges fought her way back to the forty-seven yard line, where the first fumble gave the ball to Colorado. Colorado being unable to gain, punted to Wilson on our twenty-five yard line. The game now resolved itself into a punting contest, for before we had made many yards Benedict had to punt, sending the ball fifty yards to Caley. After two attempts to gain by Colorado, Caley was forced to punt, booting the ball for thirty-five yards, and to the center of the field. Little and Wilson began to pound Colorado's line for substantial gains, but another fumble gave the ball to Colorado. At this stage of the game Caley and Benedict exchanged punts with the result that Nebraska finally got the ball on Colorado's thirty yard line on a fumble punt. Wenstrand falling on the ball. But here Colorado took a brace and received the ball on downs, Caley immediately kicked out of danger. The Cornhuskers tore holes in the Colorado line for four, and five yards at a clip, until the ball rested on Colorado's fifteen yard line. Here Nebraska was held for downs, and Caley punted against the wind, the ball going out of

GRECIAN STATUES

HAVE BEEN RECEIVED BY THE ART DEPARTMENT.

Beautiful Specimens of Greek and Italian Sculpture to Be Placed in Art Hall.

The Art Department has just received fourteen large pieces of statuary from Caproni Bros. of Boston, the purchase having been made with funds contributed by the University and the Art Department in equal proportions. Most of the statues are from the best period of Greek sculpture, but a few are specimens of Italian workmanship of the Fifteenth century. Among the statues are the famous Venus di Milo, the Quoit Thrower, the Dying Gaul, the Apollo Belvedere, and the wonderfully fine Nike of Samothrace. A number of these are life size. These pieces of sculpture will serve a number of purposes in the University. They will help the Art Gallery to take on an appearance indicative of its name; they will offer an opportunity for the general student body to get some idea of the marvellous beauty and skill which artists of olden time manifested in their creations. It is hoped that some lectures to the public may be shortly given on these subjects.

Association Ball at the Farm.

Association football has been taken up with a great deal of interest by the students in the School of Agriculture. The athletic grounds could hardly be improved upon—covering about three acres in area and well sodded. The ground has been laid off and a large bunch of students may be seen out every day in strenuous pursuit of the ball. Professor Smith has been the leading spirit in getting the game started. Association football has the advantage of being easily learned and played by all, and affords plenty of exercise. As there is no gymnasium work given at the Farm, this recreation has been taken up with a good deal of zest.

Secret Practice.

Booth began secret practice in preparation for the Minnesota game last evening. All the men were out, and Denslow had a suit on for the first time since the Ames game. His ankle is improving rapidly, and will probably let him get into the Minnesota game, although he can do nothing now but loosen it up a little each evening by taking a jaunt across the field. The scrubs are showing most commendable spirit and more were out last night than has been the case for several weeks.

Successful Band Informal.

The second Band Informal in the Art Hall last Saturday night was much more of a success than the first one a week previous. About fifty couples were present and seemed to enjoy the evening. The next informal will occur in the near future.

Phi Kappa Psi entertained informally at Walsh hall Saturday night.
