Competitive Drill.

The Pershing Rifles have been considering for some time the advisability of holding a competitive drill with some other similar organization. It is expected that arrangements will be made to hold such a drill with one of the crack companies of Omaha. Such a move would be of great interest to the students who are acquainted with the Pershing Rifles and its work.

The company was organized in the early nineties and was named after the commandant of cadets, Captain Pershing, who afterward won considerable fame in the Philippine Islands. One of the company's first achievements was to win a large and interesting competitive drill in Omaha. Since then the company has continued to devote itself especially to the small and seemingly unimportant points of drill. As a result it has won a reputation for itself. Its drill is like the movement of a vast piece of machinery, each part working smoothly and in perfect harmony with every other part.

The membership consists of men who have had some previous experience in drill and who wish to smooth off the rough edges and acquire a knowledge of the finer points of drill. All of the first sergeants have application blanks and all who wish may hand in their application for membership.

This year the company has decided to hold no formal dance. In its stead an informal hop will be held at Fraternity Hall, December 15.
