How to Do It.
 The "Student" of Edinburgh University describes one of the feats which may be performed by means of the wonderful science of jui-jitsu in the following way:
 "How to overpower two soldiers with drawn swords sitting at a table playing cards:—
 "Quietly walk up behind one of them and suddenly give a loud yell (this helps the intercostals). He will leap to his feet, when you will kick him behind the knee with one foot, and hit him behind the head with the other foot. He will fall across the table. You now jump on his back, resting your knees on his shoulders, and as the other soldier rises in amazement, grip his throat with both hands, so that he will fall back over his chair, dragging you with him. As you are being dragged across the first soldier, lunge out with both feet at his head, which leaves you with one man, whose face should now be of a dark blue-purple color, that is, of course, if you have done the trick properly. It is best to try this trick first on two persons dining, as a friend of mine tried to do it for the first time on two cavalry swordsmen. He was a kind friend and I miss him greatly."

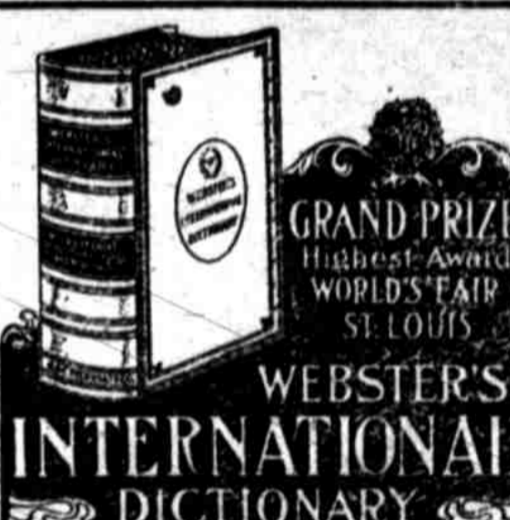

Runny Hull, '03, has been elected city electrician at Wisner, Nebr., and has charge of the construction of a new electric lighting plant at that place.
 Ray Gould, a former engineering student, spent Thanksgiving in Lincoln.
