The German-American Professorships. James H. Canfield, formerly chancellor of this University, but at present librarian of Columbia University, has an article in the current issue of the "Review of Reviews," in which he describes the interchange of professors between Germany and the United States.

"At his official diplomatic reception on New Year's Day of 1904," says Dr. Canfield, "Emperor William of Germany suggested to the American ambassador in Berlin the desirability of an exchange of professors between German and American universities, with a view of promoting a better understanding between the two peoples and a wider knowledge of their respective history and institutions."

It was not until President Murray Butler of Columbia University visited Germany last summer, however, that the suggestion became a definite scheme.

"It was then determined between the emperor and President Butler that a professorship of American history and institutions, to be known as the Theodore Roosevelt Professorship, should be established in the University of Berlin by and under the general direction of Columbia University. Incumbents are to be appointed by the Prussian Ministry of Education, with the sanction of the emperor, upon nomination of the trustees of Columbia. These nominations are not to be confined to Columbia University, but the incumbents can be men of standing from any other American institution of learning. The term of office of each incumbent will be one year.

"The plan of work includes definite lectures in course, covering American history, American constitutional law, the more fundamental and prominent problems in economics and sociology, the rise and growth of American education, and later a discussion on American literary and scientific contributions.

"In return Germany will establish a professorship of German history and institutions at Columbia University to be maintained and conducted precisely as the American professorship at Berlin. The lectures at Columbia will be in English, at Berlin in German.

"It is quite possible," says Dr. Canfield, "that a similar exchange will be made soon between the University of Paris, Oxford and other European institutions. The benefits of such an exchange are too great to be truly estimated at the present time."

The first incumbent of the new chair to be appointed by the trustees of Columbia is John William Burgess Ruggles, professor of political science and constitutional law and dean of the faculty of political science in Columbia University. He will enter upon his duties at the University of Berlin in the winter of 1906-1907, giving instruction in American political history.

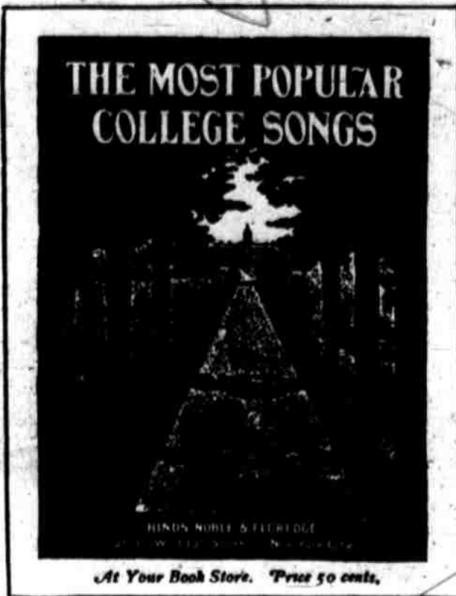

Y. W. C. A. Notes.

Who said the Y. W. C. A. girls are asleep? They cleared all of $280 at the County Fair, and perhaps more. If people wouldn't keep forgetting to turn in their tickets it might be more.

The fact that we serve cocoa Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 2 cents a cup and oyster stew Wednesday and Friday at 5 cents a bowl proves the statement that we are wide awake.

The Sunday services for December 10 and 17 show also that we are wide awake. Dr. Tuttle—you all know him, especially the Congregational girls—will speak December 10th and a splendid Christmas service is planned for the following Sunday.

Those attending the Cornhusker banquet at the Lindell hotel on last Monday were well pleased by the treatment accorded them by the management of the Lindell. Mr. C. S. Hoover has surely identified himself with the University by the way in which he has supported every enterprise undertaken by any of the student organizations. His hotel has become one of the most favorite banquet places in the city.

The members of Mr. Jorgenson's class in Old Testament characters were very agreeably surprised Tuesday evening after the lesson by a home-made "feed." Mr. Jorgenson brought a quantity of good things back with him when he returned from home and the boys showed no backwardness about making way with it.

The Messiah.

The annual production of the famous "Messiah" will fill the last convocation period before the holidays, Wednesday, December 20. The soloists are already engaged and are working on their parts. Mrs. Raymond is anxious to have as large a chorus as possible, and urges all who have ever participated in a rendition of the "Messiah" to come to as many of the rehearsals as they can, whether they belong to the chorus or not, and to take part in the production. Rehearsals are held Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at five o'clock in Memorial Hall.
