Two young women students recently left California because their examination papers corresponded too closely.

Columbia is to establish a Theodore Roosevelt professorship of American History in the University of Berlin.

The National Lumbermen's Association is to endow a chair in the Yale Forestry School.

Columbia University had an enrollment of 4,983 students, and received gifts amounting to $1,960,000 during the year 1904-1905.

A bequest of $200,000 for the foundation in New York city of a school for the study of socialism was made recently.

The largest college gymnasium is to be that of Stanford University in California. It will be 298x178 feet, and a covered quarter-mile track will surround the building.

The Yale University museum has brought to light a valuable collection of Central American antiquities. Strange to say, these relics have been in the museum building for twenty-six years, but they were in boxes, were left unopened, and their value was never realized.

The Hamilton Club of Chicago offers prizes of $100 and $50 for the best oration dealing with the life and times of Alexander Hamilton. The contest is open to nine colleges and universities, Michigan, Wisconsin, Northwestern, Chicago, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota and Knox. This is the third successive year that the prizes have been offered and the interest runs high. The contest will be decided January 11, and each of the universities is busily engaged in selecting its representatives.
