A Spirited Institution.

This is the way they do things down in New England. The other day the students at "The Tech" in Boston decided to vary the general run of existence and here is what their organ says they did:

"The rush for the 1907 Techniques was the most successful rush yet held. At 11:45 six sturdy miners of 1906, dressed in the togs of their inferno, made a dash for the window. Immediately the move was resented by several faithfuls from 1909, who rushed at the window only to be ground into the dust by the miners. When the five-minute gun went off the rush was going at blood heat. Allen, '07, after a brave fight, emerged from the crowd absolutely nude, to the horror of the female spectators. When the three-minute gun went off Munoz-Zertuche, '08, thought time was up and made a beautiful flying leap over the crowd, only to strike his head against the closed window. Just before the one-minute gun was fired three Freshmen were pulled from the crowd in an unconscious condition. It is very probable that all three will recover. At 12 o'clock three shots were fired and five hundred stout warriors, who were trying to save their strength and their faces for the Prom, made a desperate dash for the coveted books. Words cannot describe the scene enacted in the next twenty seconds. The long remembered fight with the "cops" on Rogers steps was but a ping pong match compared with this. Bleeding but smiling, the proud possessors of the first five books broke from the crowd."
