THE CORNHUSKER.

The early start of the Cornhusker staff, which has been at work since the beginning of the semester, augurs well for the success of our new and distinctively representative University student publication.

For new students it might be well to explain that at the end of last year all of the various class publications that had been produced up to that time at intervals varying from one to two years were combined for the year 1906-'07 and all subsequent years, into one volume to be called "The Cornhusker," and to be published conjointly by the Junior and Senior classes. A staff was at once selected, the Editor-in-Chief and one Managing Editor being drawn from what was then the Junior class. The Business Manager and one Managing Editor were chosen by the class of '08, and the co-operation of '09 was secured.

This year's staff, then, is complete so far as the chief positions are concerned.

It is too early to predict anything in regard to the Cornhusker yet. The machinery is being set up now and even a fragment of the finished product cannot be expected for some time. Nevertheless it is not too early to bring the publication before the eyes of the student body. Contributions of all kinds will be called for soon and it is time now for every artist or literateur to begin to "rub his think tank for sparks."

The success of the Cornhusker will depend in large measure on the support of the student body, both financially and in a literary way, and the student body, like the reader of Pettijohn's advertisement, should "bear in mind" what the situation is.

Drop in and see the Cornhusker staff. They will be glad to talk matters over with you.

The Game Today.

The football season of 1906 is on in earnest. Today will witness the first scheduled game of the year on Nebraska Field and from the minute the first down is called until the whistle is blown at the end of the second half the University of Nebraska will be in the game all the time and for all there is in it.

That the members of the team will do their best to win glory for their Alma Mater, there is not the shadow of a doubt. But they cannot fight and win alone. They must have support. They must be backed by the cheers and the praises of their fellow students.

It requires more than mere noise, however, to urge a team on to victory. The cheering must be systematically done. It must be reserved for critical moments such as "stone-walls" and "touchdowns." And to do this requires time and practice on the part of the students.

So turn out to the game this afternoon and cheer for the 'Varsity. Cheer its plays, the good and the bad. Cheer the coach. Cheer the captain. Cheer the men.

Of course we shall win. There's no question about that. But the team needs your support right now more than in any other part of the season, and it is the duty of every man in the University to see that it gets his support—and that of his co-ed friends.

Alvah C. Hough, '06, Law '08, of Lincoln, has been appointed teacher of Argumentative Composition and Debate in the Lincoln Academy. Mr. Hough was a member of the Nebraska team that debated with Wisconsin at Madison last April. He was theme-reader in the Department of Rhetoric last year, and is to be again this year. At Commencement last June Mr. Hough was awarded the Bryan Essay Prize for the best essay on "The Science of Government." He came to Nebraska from Ottawa University, Kansas, in 1904, to specialize in English writing and speaking and to study law.

The class in Botany 1 is larger than ever in the history of the University, having an enrollment of 132. As the lecture room is seated for 120, and the laboratory can accommodate only four divisions, it may be imagined that things are crowded. Additional chairs, tables and microscopes were secured yesterday, but still there are not places enough for all who have registered. Mr. Fee has been called again to supply more chairs and tables.

"Five thousand students will be enrolled at Michigan this year, according to Secretary Wade. Five years ago the four thousand mark seemed far away and almost unattainable. Now that we have improved on all previous years in attendance, there are those who are gazing fondly into the future where they see Daily headlines announcing the presence of six thousand students on the green sward of the campus."—Michigan Daily.
